Tom,

I just secured between $5000 - $7000 in donations/funding from AT&T for getting a cybercrime program started in our CJ department. Have been working on getting some outside funding for the past weeks. Have other ideas on how to get more funding. Jim Jermaine, the regional vice president of the company, and his associate Tricia Conway will work out donation details with Stacia Nemitz next. I have to do some write ups for AT&T as well.

Hope you're recovering well. Just wanted to share some good news with you.

Best regards,

Sabina

Thanks for the note. I am available Wednesday at 1:00. I reached out to a peer of mine that handles one of our grant programs. Her name is Tricia Conway. If she is available, I will likely ask her to join the call as well. If 1:00 works for you, we can try you at your office number.

Hi Jim,

I couldn't contact you by phone yesterday or today so I'll just write an email. If you have time to call me tomorrow, Wed, I'll be in my office between 12-3 pm. Office Phone # 608-342-1650 (cell # 608-331-0203). I'll gladly put a letter together outlining our plans for starting a cybercrime program here at UW-Platteville. I am primarily interested in the investigative side, not so much cyber-forensics, although my long-term plans are to also offer cyber-forensics as part of our Forensics Investigation major. Right now it is of great importance to produce police officers & detectives who understand how cyber-criminals work, how to trace them, what evidence to secure, how to properly write a search warrant for cybercrime investigation so evidence won't be thrown out on technicalities and how to put together a proper police report for this type of criminal activity. I have the support of the dean of engineering, mathematics & science, Dr. Hudson, and computer science senior faculty, Dr. Hasker.

Yesterday, at the ASIS conference, Secretary of Homeland Security Janet Napolitano called for more private security efforts.

http://www.gsnmagazine.com/node/27219?c=cyber security I plan to incorporate a close working relationship with private security, including facilitating internships for our students, to produce well trained and educated students for both the private and public sector.

Thank you again for your willingness to help us get a cyber-crime program started here at UW-Platteville.

Best regards,

Sabina
