John, below is her response to my response to her.....

In her mind the position on the CRST is prestigious; it's just another service position in everyone else's mind.

And she omits the reason for not doing it, which was to help improve the department from which improvement, presumably, she herself benefited.

She wants me to explain--I of course have a number of reasons but I will not explain them without consultation with you.

Mike

I gave up a prestigious position on the CRST at your request and you said it would be ok, that there will be other opportunities. Now you are taking away another of my opportunities for no good reason. There is no need for you as the chair to mentor Val when there is a qualified and willing senior faculty available. Please explain your reasoning.
