Unfortunately, none of those will work for me. Any time after, say, 2:15pm would work, but before that is NG.

Sabina, I don't see how we can have that be part of load. I'm unclear where it is written in your contract where you do 25% online as part of load, plus that hasn't been happening up until this request. If that is, indeed, somewhere part of your contract, I don't know why it hasn't come up until now.

As it is, we're short of face-to-face instructors. And my understanding also is that this graduate course is very unlikely to make the 27-student minimum required.

So I'm still at a loss here.

I'm still unclear what this means. Does this mean you expect to teach only 3 face-to-face classes next spring, that you expect this to be an overload, or what?

I don't know what it means when you say you were hired for 25% online teaching. You've been doing 4-4 loads this year, and before.

Surgery was successful--the symptoms in my legs are gone. I still have incision pain and other surgery-related issues, but those are child's play compared to what I had.

I expect I'll be in the office half days for now, and I'll be in later this morning. I was in yesterday afternoon and seemed to do ok--and I'm feeling pretty ok this morning. Of course, there may be some regression but for now, I'm back.

MIKE OUT OF OFFICE

I will be out of the office this week from Tuesday to Friday.

SHERI OUT OF OFFICE

Sheri is working Tuesdays and Thursdays this summer, so if you're looking for her, try one of those days. She is monitoring her email so if you have an emergency on one of her "off" days you might try that. Please limit to emergencies.

MIKE SURGERY

I will be having surgery on my back on July 8th. It's supposed to be just one night in the hospital (St. Mary's) and then home for recuperation. I am not supposed to drive for 10 days which means I'll be chauffeured. My wife Brenda is thrilled about that. :) I expect to be out most of that week and how much longer than that I do not know. I've had this surgery before, though this time is more extensive, and my recovery was pretty fast.

CHERYL FULLER SIGNATORY IN MY ABSENCE

If you need a signature or decision on something, Cheryl Fuller will be my signatory during my absence.

Sabina,

I appreciate your email, and please understand: there has been no discussion regarding terminating your contract. I don't know where that comes from.

I think meeting would be a great idea; John Lohmann tells me that in the past he has had success sitting down with the individuals and hashing things out. John also suggested that we invite Jennifer DeCoste, in her role as Diversity Officer. We can discuss any concerns you have as well as what we can do to have a more positive working relationship moving forward.

Given that I will be out of town Monday afternoon and all of next week--and I'm having back surgery on July 8--I suggest we meet at 9:30am tomorrow (Friday). Both John and Jen are available then. Will 9:30am tomorrow work for you?

We have already arranged for the FI room as it is better suited for presentations to a larger group, but if you feel the small conference room will work better, you certainly can use that, but it may be a bit crowded. Either way, we need to know so if you use the Lab, we can get it open. Let me know.

I don't have money in the budget at this point to feed them Monday evening; we have already bought several meals for them.

If you want to feed them it will have to be out of your pocket; otherwise, the expectation is that they will pay for that meal themselves, as well as lunch and dinner over the weekend. The expectation was that they would have a meal on their own Sunday night before your presentation. We have other significant costs for attractions and such, and since there was no indication at the outset how all this would be funded or what would be paid for, we have done the best we can.

Sabina, the itinerary is significantly changed from what you have, and we are working on finalizing it today. I will email it to Mario when we are done with it and pass a copy on to you.

Do not send him anything you have on the itinerary; it is not going to be accurate. I will do that. As for now, I have you doing an introductory welcome for them on Tuesday morning; we plan for you to do something on Sunday evening as well.

As per your previous request, this visit and the responsibility for it is "on me." I've asked you before to cease planning; it makes UW-Platteville look bad if there are multiple people doing different things, and we need to speak with one voice.

Again: Do not send him the itinerary. I will take care of that. Plan no more for this visit; we are doing that, as per your request.

Sabina, if you have any other information regarding the visit please forward that on to me. Specifically I need information from you on who--if anyone--is talking to the students, their contact information, who is paying for their visit, where and when they were supposed to speak, how they are traveling and their travel itinerary, and any other pertinent information.

We need this ASAP so we can contact them and determine what arrangements have been made and which arrangements are yet to be made.

Other than forwarding any remaining information on to me, please do no more planning for the visitors; you indicated your June 09 email to me that "I don't want to worry about the German delegation visit. It is on you."

In accordance with your wishes, it is on me. I've had terrific help from Deb Rice, Cheryl Fuller, Donna Anderson and Valerie Stackman and we are well on our way to getting this all resolved. But we need to know all the details.

Again, please make no more arrangements, and forward to me any remaining information.

Thank you!

Sabina:

I understand that you don't want to be in charge, but as you will be in town I assume you would want to participate and be involved because these are your guests.

But let me be clear: if you need to leave to go to Germany to be with your mother, I have no problem with that and will do anything I can to help.

We are working on the schedule here as well, Deb Rice primarily. I appreciate your work on it, but at this point, we will need to confirm things ourselves here as they involve having drivers available, and so on.

I still do not know what the budget is nor how any of this is to be paid. What will our guests be responsible for, and from where will any other overages come.

Please let me know if there are specific events with which you would like to be involved. I will send you the schedule as we put it together.

One final thing: I need the airline arrival information (Airline and flight number) in Madison, and need to know what the plans are on the last day when they leave, i.e., what are the departure plans?

Mike

PS: What are the ages of the students? Are they all 21 or older?

Sabina, and all:

These kinds of conversations, which are likely to incite a strong emotional response, are not suitable for e-mail. The nuances of face-to-face communication are lost in emails, often leading to misunderstandings. I would rather have an open dialogue in person to avoid potentially unnecessary conflict and misunderstanding.

Please recall that Aric Dutell was not going to be in the department next year had he stayed at UW Platteville. His plan was to continue in Sponsored Programs. Thus, his leaving at this time has little bearing on our staffing of the FI courses for next year.

I am somewhat confused by your comments regarding Diana Johnson. She resigned her position months in advance of classes starting in the fall. She has cleaned up and organized the lab. She gave me a tour of the lab so I would know what we have and where it is, and she indicated her willingness to work with us as we prepare the instructor for the Rockford course in the fall. I do not believe our relationship with Diana is ended, nor do I wish it to be ended. I believe we have no reason for enmity on anyone's part. I certainly have no ill-will towards her. Ultimately when one wishes to make a career change, one can make it should the opportunity arise. None of us are chained to any position.

Informing students about any of this is not the responsibility of a single faculty member; no one should be putting their own spin on what has happened, why or how. Communication of this sort of information is delicate and needs to be intentional and well-conceived. A single faculty member might communicate it well or might communicate it poorly. If done well it will be no better than the message the students will receive when we officially notify them. If done badly it can cost us students' confidence in the program. I cannot abide by anyone doing that. This is my responsibility; please do me the honor of reserving it for me.

I have been researching the issue of job opportunities for FI graduates. There are more jobs than some people's conventional wisdom suggests. The jobs are not all in Wisconsin, but that is the job market. To my knowledge this is being communicated to FI students. That being said, I am certainly open to discussions and an exchange of ideas regarding how we can better serve our students.

I believe endless conflict in our department will distract us and detract from our effort to deliver the quality education our students deserve. I expect disagreements to be productive, collegial and less inflammatory than has been the case in the recent past. To that end I do not want to continue the practice of long email chains back and forth. If you have a concern I expect you to see me.

We have an opportunity to look forward here; looking back serves little if any purpose, and distracts us from our mission. Let's endeavor to keep our focus on what is ahead of us.

Mike

Sabina:

I'm sorry to hear about your mother. When will you be leaving for Germany?

Please forward to me all the arrangements you've already made, including:

- who is coming, their names and emails
- times
- dates
- lodging
- dinners and lunches and such as have been arranged
- events arranged and times/dates
- bus arrangements
- pickup at airport and return to airport; which airport?
- travel arrangements
- contact persons, emails and phone numbers

I'm also in need of budget information; how much are they being charged, and what is the breakdown of costs and cost structure? Do you have an account already set up in which that money may be deposited and from which costs may be paid?

Please forward the above information to me by the end of today. Thank you!

Mike

PS: I have a pamphlet for you from HR for our Employee Assistance Program. I have placed it in your mailbox.

PPS: Let me know when you are leaving for Germany and what your expected return might be.

Verbal communication doesn't always work, Mike!

DIANA JOHNSON LEAVING UW-PLATTEVILLE
PERSONNEL ISSUES AND SEARCHES
700-HOUR ACADEMY

DIANA JOHNSON LEAVING UW-PLATTEVILLE

In a move that surprised many of us, Diana Johnson resigned her position at UW-Platteville on June 4. She is moving to Milwaukee. We wish her the best as she moves on to a new stage in her life.

Obviously we have some position filling to do and work has begun on that. If you know of anyone who may be able to fill in for Diana's courses in the fall, please let me know.

PERSONNEL ISSUES and SEARCHES

Our next year promises to be busy from a personnel point of view. Here are the position openings:

Ed Ross (retiring December 2014)
Aric Dutelle (June 1 2014)
Diana Johnson (June 4 2014)
Lorne Gibson (leaving UW-Platteville following 2014/15 school year)
Department Chair

I have a meeting scheduled with the Dean and Provost next week, where we will discuss the open positions and other issues. I remain hopeful that we will be allowed to fill them.

I believe personnel issues are intertwined with curriculum, the 700-hour academy, the FI program, the reports of the outside reviewers I sent to you a couple weeks ago, and strategic planning. Turnover in personnel always gives us options and possibilities; sometimes things remain the same.

I expect we will need to do some serious planning as a department as we look at where we are, where we've come from, and where we want to go. Are there courses we should be offering? Courses we no longer need to offer, or which can be revamped to better suit our purposes? Should we be looking at a revamp of the program?

Please have all those ideas in mind as we move through the summer.

700-HOUR ACADEMY

I want to clarify a few things relating to the 700-hour Academy, and our looking at whether we can embed that in our curriculum.

I had hoped to have a department meeting just before we left to clarify some of this, but there were additional potential conditions that may have made the discussion moot, so rather than waste your time we didn't do that.

Rex, Joe, Pat and I have been working on these issues since last October. We've always welcomed input and anyone who wishes to help us sort this out, and the invitation remains.

We've been working to see if it is feasible to embed the Academy within our program without cheapening the 120-credit degree that students normally achieve. Not Rex, nor Pat, nor Joe, nor I want this to become a training curriculum; we're a university, not a training facility.

And yet, there are redundancies in the Academy curriculum for which our student pay twice; the Academy as the Training and Standards Board envisions it cannot be included under student financial aid; and it greatly delays the entry of students into the workforce, in addition to having greater cost.

As we have moved forward--Pat has been the main person focusing on these issues, with input from others--we've looked to see how we can get students Academy credit for what they're already learning in our program, how we can get the costs subsumed under students' financial aid umbrella, and how to do it within a 4-year time frame.

Some courses might be modified to include the material in a framework that allows students to earn Academy credit in addition to Academic (B.S.) credit. Perhaps we would need to create some new courses, though exactly how that would work isn't clear yet. There may not be room to add things in some courses, or we may need to have students take material outside of class, for which they would receive no Academic (B.S.) credit, but would receive Academy credit. For instance, maybe there would need to be a Monday afternoon Academy class taught by non-UW-Platteville faculty, for Academy credit only. Or Saturday. Or a night "class." Or something else. Students just wouldn't get UW-Platteville credit for it.

The point is that not everything can--or would--be done in our own courses. Much of the material is training-oriented, and doesn't fit our curricular model. That kind of thing doesn't belong in our courses, and nobody yet has expressed any interest in doing that.

As we move forward exploring this possibility, we need to see what can be done, what can't but could under different circumstances, what options we have available, what courses could be adjusted and which cannot, and ultimately how this might be done.

I remain optimistic that we can find ways to do this. We invite and encourage your participation as we move ahead.

And one more note related to this: in my years on City Council and as President of the Common Council, I was asked by many how they might present their ideas to the Council. I'd tell them to anticipate the questions and issues that are likely to be raised by the Council, and be ready to provide answers or solutions.

That's what we've been doing w/r/t the 700-hour Academy--looking at the issues, the problems, seeing what answers and solutions might exist, and being able to present those to the CJ Department faculty. We've tried to anticipate questions and issues and see where they take us. We've looked at all sorts of issues ranging from potential need for additional staff, costs, cost recovery, value to the program, scheduling, financial aid, and so on. That doesn't mean we've uncovered every issue, but we've looked at a lot of them.

And again, anyone who would like to be involved with this, you're more than welcome.

 ARIC DUTELLE TAKING NEW POSITION

Aric Dutelle has submitted his resignation; my understanding is that Aric is leaving us at the end of the academic year (June 1?) for a new opportunity in Oregon.

We wish Aric the best as he pursues this new opportunity.

 ED ROSS POSITION SEARCH

Cheryl Fuller is chairing the search for Ed Ross's replacement (not that Ed can ever be replaced, but rather, we'll find someone to fill his position :). Rex Reed and Amy Nemmetz are also on that search committee; so too is Audera Cox, one of our students.

The plan is to put out an ad in early-to-mid July with a closing date in early September, and from which time the review and interviewing process will proceed.

If you know of anyone who might be interested in the position please point them toward the hiring process and encourage them to apply. I will forward to you a copy of the position description and ad when it has gone through final approval.

 OUTSIDE REVIEWER REPORTS

I've received the final reports from both Allen Ault and Stan Stojkovic; I have attached them to this email.

The reports are interesting; I'm not sure I completely agree with everything that is said, but at the same time, I tend to place a great deal of credence in the reports given the long and distinguished careers of both reviewers, and that they are deans of their respective units.

We need to do some thinking and planning as a result of these reports as well as other issues including pending personnel changes. I don't want us to do a knee-jerk reaction to any of this, but we should think carefully about their recommendations and come together as colleagues to assess their suggestions and implement meaningful changes as makes sense.

 GRADUATING SENIOR COMMENTS FROM FI COURSE

Allen Ault met with a couple of classes, and some of his interaction with those students finds its way into his report. I asked one student to collate responses from graduating seniors in FI as to suggestions about the program; that is the third attachment.

I find all of the suggestions interesting; not all are necessarily implementable but there are some good ideas there. If I had to characterize the suggestions it's that students want more. Please take those into account as well as we think about this.

700-HOUR ACADEMY UPDATE

I'd hoped to have had a department meeting this week whose primary purpose would be to discuss the 700-hour academy issue (now up to 714 hours), but we were still waiting for information that would have helped place things in context, and it came in too late.

Pat, Rex, and Joe have been working with me on this issue; we believe there is a way to embed the academy in our curriculum in such a way to eliminate the redundancies in education inherent in the way the current academy is done, without turning our program into a training curriculum. We don't train, we educate. We have no intention of losing that.

There has not been as much cooperation from Training and Standards as we might have liked, and this will inform us as we move forward. There are opportunities here which leads us to the next topic:

STRATEGIC PLANNING

I want to have a strategic planning process begun before the fall semester kicks off. Perhaps a retreat, perhaps an outside facilitator, perhaps something else. The outside reviewer reports should serve as a place of departure for us to discuss the future of the overall program and we need to think about those things in terms of enrollment, job opportunities, and future department reputation.

I will be back to you with further information on this; if you have any ideas or suggestions on how this might proceed, please let me know.

Have a great summer; it's been a long and difficult year for everyone, in more ways than one. Rest, recharge, and be prepared to think creatively as we move forward this fall.

I spoke w/ Dave K this pm, I think he agrees it should just be expunged. He's going to talk to the powers that be about it and hopefully get approval to do that.

Joe and I were talking about student participation in out-of-classroom experiences (speakers, field trips, career day, CJA, Crime Scene Revisited, Pacce project, things like that).

His thought was to have some sort of medallion or some such that they would wear when they graduated, denoting a high level of extracurricular engagement. I've seen them where the medallion was on a nice wide ribbon and made clear the student's honor, whatever it is.

I have on my list to call the commencement committee as to whether we even can have such a medallion for CJ students at graduation. If that's possible the next step would be to determine whether the faculty here want something like that, and how much involvement should be required to earn one.

Maybe that can be done simultaneously with developing a department pin or logo or some such.

It has been brought to my attention that some faculty may be leaving graded materials with names on the material outside their offices or in another public place for students to pick up.

As it turns out, this is a FERPA violation, and as such, please remove any graded material left out for students in such a manner. You'll have to return materials individually to each student.

Thank you for your cooperation and haste in addressing this issue!

SEARCH TO COMMENCE TO FILL ED ROSS' ACADEMIC STAFF POSITION

As a result of Ed's pending retirement at the end of Fall Semester 2014, we need to search for someone to fill Ed's position. Our plan is to start the paperwork now, get a job description and ad completed, then put them out there in July, with a closing date in early September.

I've asked Cheryl Fuller to chair that search and we have asked Rex Reed, Amy Nemmetz, and student Audera Cox to serve on that committee.

After talking to Ed, Cheryl will send out a draft of the job description for comment, so please look for that and give Cheryl your feedback, if any.

GERMAN DELEGATION TO VISIT IN JUNE

Sabina Burton is hosting a delegation of visiting students from Germany for 10 days starting June 16th. We look forward to their arrival; if you would like to be involved or meet them please contact Sabina.

REPORTS FROM AULT/STOJKOVIC PENDING

I'm still waiting on final reports from our outside reviewers; I hope we have them before we adjourn for the summer, so we can review them and begin considering them as precursor to some strategic planning. When I get their final reports, I'll pass them on to you.

HIRING OF GRADUATE ASSISTANT

With the funding available from the Distance Learning Center we will be hiring a graduate assistant; we're looking forward to another pair of helping hands in the fall.

POST-TENURE REVIEW

Faculty who are tenured should ensure they do student evaluations as part of their post-tenure review. I think everyone is aware, consider this just a reminder.

As most of you know, the college and university are in a financial bind such that we, as a college, must come up with a $400,000 budget reduction for the next budget cycle.

I met with Dean Throop on Friday to discuss options; position cuts escaped the first go-around, but we looked carefully at other places to find resources.

It seemed clear, as a result of our meeting, that internship compensation will be evaluated and quite possibly, adjusted downward. How far, I do not know yet, but it seems equally clear that the days where faculty would receive 1/60.5 of their annual salary per student supervised, are ending.

I will do my best to encourage a fair and reasonable compensation for the internships we supervise, but I expect the amount paid, at the high end, to be reduced. In case any of your summer or other future plans were dependent upon a specific compensation based on previous year's pay, please be advised that it's likely to be less.

I have another meeting scheduled with the Dean to discuss the specifics; I will let you know as soon as possible what the result is.

Last night the Rockford School Board approved the agreement between Rockford Public Schools and UW-Platteville to offer dual-enrollment courses.

There are variations as to how it will be offered, but the ideal scenario is to have someone on their staff teach it; that kind of person is hard to find (they actually have someone who is a former police officer on staff with a Masters degree, but he's at a different school), but maybe.

If that doesn't work, next step is to hire someone onto their staff with proper qualifications (Masters in CJ or Education or related field, plus policing or related experience). If that doesn't work, then a third alternative is for us to hire someone down there to teach it; finally, if none of that is possible, we'll do it remotely from here.

If you know of anyone in Rockford or vicinity who might be interested in doing this, or either/both of the follow-on courses Evidence Collection and Preservation or Intro to CJ, please let them (and me!) know.

Subject: Student who is struggling

Dr. Sabina Burton brought to me concerns about a student in her class, Max Anderson (andersoma@uwplatt.edu), who has been readmitted in the fall after having been dismissed in 2011.

Mr. Anderson has missed assignments, been late for or did not come in for appointments, has been late on advising, and generally seems to be approaching his studies in a way that isn't likely to be successful for him. Dr. Burton has indicated she has some inkling that there may be family issues underlying this problem, but the specifics she is not clear on.

I have asked Dr. Burton to ask Mr. Anderson to come in and see me about these issues, and I will see what I can determine about them. In the meantime, I would like Mr. Anderson to be on your radar. There is no indication he is a threat to harm himself or others, but his approach to school is not one likely to meet with success.

You can find this file on the S: drive under Workgroups/Criminal Justice. It's a big .PDF file.

If you would, please take a look at this for any adjustments or changes and let me know if you find anything amiss.

One I noted is this: Police Function, CJ 2130, lists Introduction to Criminal Justice, CJ 1130, as either a pre- or a co-requisite. I've been informed that this is incorrect, that CJ 1130 is a pre-requisite and that both may not be taken concurrently.

I'd like a ruling on that :) but also, look through CJ and FI and see if the requirements and course descriptions are accurate, especially in areas you teach.

Thank you!

Mike

Mike,

You told me a few months ago that you would look into the Dutelle book orders. What did you find out? Did he personally benefit from having his second edition ordered after just two years? If so what will be done about it? I know you want me to leave the "past in the past" but that is hard to do when the past still affects us/me greatly. My students have to make do with a 9 year old edition but the FI students got the newest edition without any need for it. Not fair. This double standard must be addressed in the department meeting. Everyone should know about it.

Sabina, they're running short of textbook money; could you live with the older textbook you were using in the Women and the Law class?

Stan Stojkavich has asked to meet, as a group, with our faculty/staff. While there are a couple people for whom this will not work, I'd like to buy pizza and/or subs and have lunch here with Stan. I've reserved the large conference room from 11:30 to 1:00pm tomorrow; if you do not have class during that time, please come by and meet with Stan.

Stan will also meet with many of us outside of that time, but his time here is somewhat more abbreviated than was Allen's, so for those we are unable to schedule with Stan, please see him in the conference room.

I'll have food; don't bring lunch.

STAN STOJKAVICH VISITING WED THRU FRI AM--MEETING TIMES

Stan Stojkavich, an alumnus of UW-Platteville and currently the Dean of the Helen Bader School of Social Welfare at UW-Milwaukee, will be visiting Wednesday evening through Friday morning as the second outside reviewer. You can see more about Stan here:

http://www4.uwm.edu/hbssw/Faculty_Staff/Stojkovic.cfm

His time here is more abbreviated than Allen Ault's so we'll have to squeeze some things in. If you would be able to meet with Stan Friday morning please let me know--I know we don't have classes but some of you may be here anyway.

I'm still waiting on Allen's report, and I will share his conclusions with you when they arrive.

ROCKFORD UPDATE

The Rockford project proceeds apace; the Rockford School Board reviewed the agreement in the first reading last week, and next week will presumably take action on it.

700-HOUR ACADEMY+DEPARTMENT MEETING

Rex, Joe, Pat and I continue to work on issues related to the 700-hour academy, including the possibility of embedding the academy within our program. The trick is to do it without sacrificing the integrity of the existing 120-credit curriculum, meet the requirements of Training and Standards.

I'd like to have a department meeting in the near future to get some fresh eyes on the project, in addition to a few other items. Looking for a better time than 7am.

Hello All!

I hope that the Advising season for fall classes is going well.

As part of the General Education Requirements for the new catalog and upcoming academic year, the FYE office wanted to remind you of the following:

- All students who have completed less than 30 credits and entering in the fall of 2014 will need to register for UWP Study 1010, Biology 1020, or GE 1000. This includes incoming transfer students who fall under this category.
- Two UWP Study 1010 sections have been set aside specifically for transfer students. These include:

* Section 14: Wednesday from 3-3:52 pm (full semester) with Melissa Gormley and Jeremy Belanger

* Section 15: Tuesday/Thursday from 1-1:52 pm (first 8 weeks) with Jodi McDermott and Tricia Pothour

Those students (transfer and other students) under 30 completed credits are welcome to take any of the additional sections that are currently available. A list of these sections can be found on PASS. Several sections are listed for specific majors (agriculture, business, music, industrial studies, and criminal justice) however all other sections are open enrollment to all majors. Please make sure to verify that your student is the appropriate section as needed.

We would greatly appreciate it if you could please pass this information on to those who advise within your departments/colleges.

Please feel free to contact me should you have questions.

Allen Ault's visit--bio, schedule, etc.

From : Michael Dalecki <dalecki@uwplatt.edu>

Subject : Allen Ault's visit--bio, schedule, etc.

To : Michael Dalecki <dalecki@uwplatt.edu>, Sabina Burton <burtions@uwplatt.edu>, Thomas E Caywood <caywood@uwplatt.edu>, Dana L Cecil <cecild@uwplatt.edu>, Steven Elmer <elmerst@uwplatt.edu>, Cheryl Fuller <banachoc@uwplatt.edu>, Diana Johnson <johnsondi@uwplatt.edu>, Joe Lomax <lomaxj@uwplatt.edu>, Rex Reed <reedre@uwplatt.edu>, Deborah L Rice <ricede@uwplatt.edu>, Edward Ross <rosse@uwplatt.edu>, Pat Solar <solarp@uwplatt.edu>, Aric Dutelle <dutellea@uwplatt.edu>, Sheri Kratcha <kratcha@uwplatt.edu>

Allen Ault, Dean of the College of Justice and Safety at Eastern Kentucky University, is visiting us early this week as an outside reviewer/consultant. He offers "fresh eyes" which can sometimes see things those of us on the inside cannot. Dr. Ault's bio is here: <http://justice.eku.edu/about/deanBio.php> I think you'd agree that his experience both in the field as well as academia make him an interesting candidate for this exercise.

Much like the SWOT exercise of a few weeks back, I would like Dr. Ault--and Dr. Stojkavich later this month--to look for areas of strengths we should maintain or embellish, areas of weakness we should examine and shore up if necessary, opportunities we may be missing (structurally, programmatically or otherwise), and threats to where we are as well as where we are going.

I don't see how either can do this without a chance to talk to you. Much like how an anthropologist might work to uncover the culture of a society by embedding themselves in that culture, so too I hope both Dr. Ault and Dr. Stojkavich can clearly see who and what we are.

I have no preconceived notions here. I am a scientist; the data speaks. Let's find out what outsiders have to say about us. We can either view that as a threat or an opportunity. If treated as the former, it's a waste of everyone's time; if the latter, it might just help us strengthen a program that has many fine attributes.

I've attached the tentative schedule below; some of the times are shorter due to the need to move across campus, and in a couple cases squeezing into the schedule. If you haven't a spot on the schedule, let me know.

A while back I met with most of you to look at SWOT: strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats. There were a few themes that emerged though there was less consensus than I might have expected. Here are the places of, if not consensus, then at least a few people agreeing:

Strengths: Faculty, agency contacts, reputation.

Weaknesses: Internal politics and Interpersonal issues, salaries, FI rigor

Opportunities: Rockford project, FICSH, Embedded academy, Training opportunities in FI/CJ

Threats: 700-hour academy

There were many other thoughtful answers, the above just represents areas where there were at least a few people pointing these things out.

I know you're busy with advising and all, but let's use this opportunity to help make this department better.

Dear Dr. Dalecki,

Kerie Wedige, of the Community Education Department, was kind enough to give me your contact information.

As part of our summer reading program at Verona Public Library, I'm hoping to have a one-time Forensic Science program for teens. I noticed that UW-Platteville hosted a Forensic Science Camp during the summer last year.

I was wondering if UW-Platteville has ever done one-time community outreach programs, or if you would consider providing such a program. Would any of your instructors (perhaps a teaching assistant? Or older, reliable student?) be interested in hosting a paid program at our library? Or do you know of anyone who would be interested?

My teen programs are usually listed for ages 11-18, but that's flexible. For the program, I was thinking of including some basic hands-on activities, like fingerprinting, casting a shoe tread, etc. . . with some explanation of where the evidence leads.

I plan on having my special guest programs on Wednesdays (but this could be flexible too), and the reading program runs from June 17th through July 24th.

Does any of this sound possible? I would love to give kids who might not have the financial ability the chance to experience forensic science first-hand, even if it's a basic version!

Thanks for your time!

Dr. Sabina Burton brought to me concerns about a student in her class, Max Anderson (andersoma@uwplatt.edu), who has been readmitted in the fall after having been dismissed in 2011.

Mr. Anderson has missed assignments, been late for or did not come in for appointments, has been late on advising, and generally seems to be approaching his studies in a way that isn't likely to be successful for him. Dr. Burton has indicated she has some inkling that there may be family issues underlying this problem, but the specifics she is not clear on.

I have asked Dr. Burton to ask Mr. Anderson to come in and see me about these issues, and I will see what I can determine about them. In the meantime, I would like Mr. Anderson to be on your radar. There is no indication he is a threat to harm himself or others, but his approach to school is not one likely to meet with success.

As most of you know, changes in the Core Education component require students entering or transferring in to take two (2) writing intensive courses as part of graduation requirements.

We will need to find courses here which meet those requirements, such that students can earn CJ or FI credit while also meeting the Writing Intensive component.

This actually fits well with our upper-division courses where writing should be a large component of what students are doing.

One concern faculty sometimes express is that they are not English faculty, ergo, they're concerned about "grading" writing. That is not what this is about--rather, it's using writing to teach the subject. That can involve a number of techniques but often includes a method of feedback on writing and its subsequent improvement.

There are ways to incorporate a significant writing component without it becoming an undue grading burden. I use 1-page papers, and have in the past even used 25-word Precis to meet writing requirements. Done correctly, these can be relatively pain-free to grade.

The procedures for instituting and listing writing intensive courses are being finalized, but if you'd like to do this in the fall, please let me know. I expect that we will limit section sizes in these classes.

I planted a seed. It wasn't with you, but you may recall it was part of a conversation you and I had when you were working on your file for DRB submission.

The seed has germinated.

There is a group of 8 German CJ professionals visiting for 10 days this summer in the middle of June; Sabina Burton is hosting them, and wonders if it would be possible for them to sit in one of your academy classes or activities? We don't want to do anything that would get you in dutch w/ T&S, and all they would do is listen and observe. We have no particular subject in mind, but wondered if this might be possible? Normally we might have them sit in classes here, but we have none at that time.

Hello everyone,

The ILC decided that we want to be as proactive as possible in receiving applications for the Underkofler Award this year even though the call has not gone out yet. I contacted the System office and they said they plan on putting a call out, it just hasn't happened yet.

Last year the ILC revamped the application process for the campus teaching award so that we could better align with UW System awards such as the Regents Teaching Award and the Underkofler. This means that you all have been through the process of putting together much of the material required and we would very much like to encourage you to apply. Most years that UW-Platteville has put forward applicants and they have done really well (Amanda Trewin won last year).

I have attached last year's information so that you can start to plan if you wish to apply. I would like to put forth a tentative due date of March 14th however we do not have the System deadline yet so if you would like to take Spring Break to work on your materials, you may have that time to do so.

More information will be going out to the campus as a whole, so be on the look out for that as well.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

Tera

CAREER DAY: CLASSES SHOULD MEET AS NORMAL

Classes should meet as per normal on Tuesday, Career Day. Certainly we should urge our students to take part in career day, but we also need to hold classes.

CAREER DAY: DEPT PERSONNEL NEEDED TO STAFF CJ TABLE

We will have a table at Career Day, and we need people to staff it at various times of the day. Non-CJ students also attend Career Day and it's a chance to recruit. There is a signup sheet at Sheri's desk up front.

EXTERNAL REVIEWERS IN APRIL

I have secured two external reviewers to assess our program in April.

Allen Ault, Dean of the College of Justice & Safety at Eastern Kentucky University will be joining us on April 7th and 8th. Stan Stojkovich, Dean of the Helen Bader School of Social Welfare at UW-Milwaukee, will join us April 17th and 18th.

I will be asking them for a program overview and to give us their views of Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, and Threats, as well as where we can strengthen our programs in CJ and FI. This is, in part, in preparation for HLC accreditation in 2016, as well as the normal kind of review any department should do on a periodic basis.

If you have specific questions you'd like them to consider, please forward them on to me.

700-HOUR ACADEMY

Joe, Pat and I travel to Madison on Friday morning to meet with Training and Standards personnel regarding the new 700 hour academy. The thrust of our meeting will be whether academy requirements can be integrated into our program in such a way that we lose nothing of what we do now while still having the potential for students to graduate with a 4-year degree while also being certifiable. There are a number of possible ways we might do this, all predicated on eliminating the needless redundancy and extra cost for our students. Failure to address these issues will be costly to our program in the long run.

If you have any ideas, please let us know, plus Rex, who cannot make it on Friday.

ROCKFORD

Pat and I met with Dave Carson of the Rockford School District and Lori Sweeney, Deputy Chief of the Rockford Police Department last Friday; we had an excellent meeting, and the Rockford Police Department is interested in this project as well. We may find qualified instructors there which would enable a face-to-face experience for Rockford students. Dave noted that students were asked to indicate interest in the program; 85 signed up! Then Dave dropped the other shoe: he says the OTHER THREE high schools also want to get in on this.

That can't happen this time around, but it's indicative of the potential of this effort. We also have interest in our doing something similar here in Wisconsin with rural schools, stitching together large enough section sizes from several rural schools using distance learning technology and remote teaching.

All of this will involve some work but I keep reminding myself that a lot of other places would like to have our problems. :)

Saving the grade roster will allow the grade to be viewed by the student in their student center. Faculty may enter all grades; however, it is important to at least enter the low grades (D or F). There's not an actual deadline for the grades to be submitted; however, keep in mind that the last day for students to drop a class for the semester is March 24th. Therefore, it would be beneficial to the students to enter them prior to that date so students can drop if necessary.

Hello Mike,

I had something come across my desk today that might be of interest to someone in the CJ Department. I have attached an RFP entitled "NIJ 'Sentinel Events' Review Approach to Learning from Criminal Justice System Errors". If this is of interest to anyone, please have them contact me. The proposal deadline is May 22.

An ORSP timeline for submission can be found at: <http://www3.uwplatt.edu/sponsored-programs/grant-submission-timeline-and-checklist>

WOW! There are a few edits, a few formatting things but...it really looks great, doesn't it?

You might do some circle the answer things for gender and year in school. Also, if you look at the question order, it is out of order.

As a draft, I think it's pretty much there for sending to the IRB.

Couple comments: Question six is unclear; it's not exhaustive (there's no answer for "I haven't been") plus it isn't clear whether "experiencing bullying" includes DOING it.

I know that question 5 is supposed to skip them to question 9 if they haven't experienced it, but question8 is about using tobacco, so there's a sequencing issue here.

You'll need to fix the "disagree" in the first matrix questions. Also, some of the other "yes/no" questions might also be likert items, such as questions 1-4 as well as a few others.

Dr. D

PS: Amber, when I've done these booklet formats in the past, I don't try to "interleave" pages until the very last time I do it, so that it will flow from one to the next as per normal. Might make it easier for the IRB to figure it out.

PPS: I like your front page. I also like how you bolded the items in the first paragraph. Makes it much clearer and much more likely the kids will read it.

ED ROSS TO RETIRE
ROCKFORD MOVES AHEAD
700-HOUR ACADEMY UPDATE

ED ROSS TO RETIRE

It is a sad day in CJ-land; Ed Ross has submitted paperwork indicating his desire to retire following the end of the 2014 Fall Semester.

Dean Throop has indicated that we may search for a replacement for Ed's position in the Fall semester. We'll initiate that process sometime later this semester.

ROCKFORD MOVES AHEAD

The Rockford initiative where high school students earn advanced standing here at UW-Platteville is moving ahead. Rather than an initial class of up to 30 students starting in Fall, 2014, Rockford schools has indicated they're more likely to have enough enough students for two 30-student sections. This, of course, presents both opportunities and challenges.

We're in the final stages of working out a MOU (memorandum of understanding) with costs, what we supply, and so on. We're hoping to have this all put to bed in 30 days or so.

700-HOUR ACADEMY UPDATE

We have a tentative meeting scheduled with Training and Standards people in Madison on March 7. They haven't confirmed a time yet.

They have offered to work with us here at UW-Platteville in creating an academy embedded in the program. We're not sure exactly what that means, and part of the puzzle is how to include those elements without sacrificing any of what we do currently, which nobody here is interested in doing.

That meeting will give us a better idea of where they can work with us to allow modifications that fit what we do here.

Sabina, I don't think I can. I'm almost certain that when research involves minors, it must go through a full board review.

I also do not know if we have an HSR policy in the department, and I don't think I can sign that form until I know that. But that aside, I still think there are issues with doing research with minors. It may be best to contact the head of the IRB and ask specifically about that.

Also: in the application:

Part's A and B reverse the proper use of "effect" and "affect," and should be corrected. There are other errors in the piece which should be corrected before submission.

I want to meet with each of you by February 15th to discuss four things: strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats (SWOT) to our program, where you see us being in five years, and where you see yourself in five years. I'll pull this together in a form for all of us to see.

Per our college meeting yesterday, in 2015 tenured faculty will have to submit a Post-tenure Review form (attached). It is LAE's turn to do this.

Among the items that will need to be included are student evals from Spring and Fall 2014, so make sure you have those done if otherwise you would not.

Also included in the Post-Tenure review form is a summary of major activities since the previous post-tenure review, and a personal plan for continuing growth and development until the next review.

This review must be completed at the department level by March 31, 2015. Included in that process is a meeting with the department chair prior to that date. Please ensure that meeting is completed by January 31, 2015. The meeting will address development needs of the faculty member to make progress toward achieving the plan's goals, and shall recommend ways of helping the faculty member achieve those goals.

Please have this on your radar as we move forward this year.

Thank you!

Is anyone interested in teaching summer pre-session? We need to get a summer schedule in, and we normally don't offer much F2F, but there may be some opportunity. Look back in the Hasker program, see if anything "makes" in terms of enrollment.

If you would like to do something, let me know ASAP.

Dale, Dr. Burton indicates she is willing to change this to a "W" if that is possible administratively. I'm fine with that. Administratively, what process do we need to follow here? Grade change?

Ultimately it's your call as the professor. It does seem he wanted the "W", though it ended up causing Kyle more work. Your emails to him were excellent.

If you're willing to do the "W" I'll sign off on it.

I rec'd this today--details in the original email below.

Just an administrative goof or did he actually fail the course? If he didn't actually do anything then I don't see any reason we can't purge his record of this item.

You know, I could have gone through the entire weekend, not seen that link, and been no worse off. :)

On the one hand, I can't believe anyone would go into Wal-Mart looking like those people did. On the other hand, I can't imagine anyone feeling compelled to take pictures of them!

The name above is closer--if we could find four words each ending in "...ing"

Hacking, Stalking, ID Thieving, and....something. :)

Hmmmm....Hacking, Stalking, Bullying, and ID Thieving.

Hmmmm.....

I'm not offended. I'm glad you feel comfortable enough with me to have this discussion. We should always be able to argue passionately about things that matter to us, then set that disagreement aside at the end and go out and have a beer. That's the best kind of collegiality!

I want to caution you--Tom has decided to cast this decision in a specific light, and to do any arguing with him via email won't change his mind but will put on paper something else they can bring forward.

In my view, the best thing to do is allow the decision of the DRB to move forward. In my opinion, Tom is baiting us--and you--in an attempt to get you to say or do something that will weaken our case. His cutting me out of the loop is expected--of course he doesn't want me involved, because I have a lot more to say on this. And when the time comes, later, I'll say it. But not now. It's not yet time.

Sabina, the audience that matters at this point is the CRST. Anything--~~ANYTHING~~--you say to Tom via email can be easily printed off and used in the CRST context to demonstrate the process was somehow unfair. I don't think it was, and we gave Lorne the opportunity to offer additional information at reconsideration and he elected to not do that.

I spoke w/ Kory Wein last night late and he indicated that Lorne cannot add material to his file that we, in the DRB, do not see but the CRST does see. His file is done. However, there will be an appeal and your email exchanges may well become part of that. Once you send that email you've lost control of it.

Sabina, our audience at this point should be the CRST, the Dean, and any higher body that reviews this. Arguing via email in the Department won't strengthen our case and could potentially weaken it. There's no upside here!

I urge you: save your arguments for later, when we may need to use them during appeals. You never want to give others a sneak-preview of what you're going to say.

Go play with your horses, enjoy your kids, spend time with Roger--do something to enjoy the weekend before the cold on Monday and Tuesday!

A reminder of the department meeting tomorrow morning.

Here's the agenda as I have it now; I'll have copies of that, the previous meeting minutes, and this agenda:

Dept. Meeting 1/21/14, 7:00am, Large Conference Room.

1. Review and approve minutes of previous meeting.
2. Updates/Reminders/Info:
 - a. 700-hour academy.
 - b. Rockford advanced-standing initiative. We'll want someone with a Masters to teach it, or team a sub-Masters degree with a higher degree.
 - c. Student help (work-study)
 - d. Professional Development budget ($500 each for full time)
 - e. I've asked Pat Solar to serve as interim FI coordinator for spring.
 - f. Aric Dutelle expected to be in Sponsored Programs 2014/15 as well
 - g. Internships. We'll be scheduling a meeting of internship supervisors and students later in the semester.
3. Enrollment update. More FI, fewer CJ. Blip or are there long-term program implications?
4. CJ Summer Camp

The continuing education people have elected not to organize this; do we want to try to do some sort of CJ camp this summer? This is related to enrollment trends.

5. I'd like to hire a couple work-study students this semester to follow up our grads and create numbers on placement following graduation. If you'd like to work on or supervise this please let me know. I'd like us to get better information on placement rates.

6. Strategic review of department in anticipation of re-accreditation.

I want to meet with each of you by February 15th to discuss four things: strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats (SWOT) to our program, where you see us being in five years, and where you see yourself in five years. I'll pull this together in a form for all of us to see.

My Zimbra is up to date--please schedule a time (an hour is probably enough) to talk about these things.

7. Outside reviewers. I want to bring in at least two outside consultants to look at our department and look at us with fresh eyes, assess our curriculum and its relevance, and look for problems/opportunities. I'm thinking that will be done in April. We will need to do some departmental planning prior to that in February and March. Any suggestions or interest in specific involvement, please let me know

8 Other.

9. Adjourn

In this email:

DEPARTMENT MEETING TUESDAY 7:00amCAUTIONS IN OUR TEACHING*REASONS FOR BEING ABSENT*700-HOUR ACADEMY UPDATE*ROCKFORD UPDATE

DEPARTMENT MEETING TUESDAY January 21st 7:00am

What it says. We'll be done by 7:50 for anyone w/ an 8:00am class. We'll meet in the large conference room.

Adjuncts teaching less than half time do not need to attend, but they may if they like.

CAUTIONS IN OUR TEACHINGExams

I want to remind everyone that over-reliance on multiple-choice exams in our classes--especially upper-division classes--is a weak style of assessment. Students can sometimes guess their way to a passing grade where they could never pass an exam that required them to produce that knowledge without being prompted.

While it may occasionally be desirable to include such exam questions, I hope everyone is working to move away from that style of teaching in the upper-division courses and toward more rigorous styles of assessment.

If you would like some ideas on how to do this, please feel free to meet with me or staff at the TLC. There are ways to do this that don't result in huge and difficult grading loads.

Videos

As well, an over-reliance on videos in classroom settings is counter to what we provide that no recorded material can provide: face-to-face interaction with highly qualified faculty.

Especially where students may watch videos outside of classroom time, using class time for videos can have the effect of cheating students out of the interaction they've paid for.

This is not to say they should never be used; in the interviewing class, for instance, short clips illustrating mannerisms, body language, and so on are quite appropriate in demonstrating and analyzing interview subjects. And there are other opportunities where video usage in class is appropriate.

Extra Credit

Extra credit is a difficult issue; over-reliance on extra credit can teach students that they do not have to do their best work at the outset, since they know they can "fix" a mediocre performance with extra credit. People will do what we incentivize them to do, and extra credit sometimes gives students incentive to do less than their best.

As well, please be careful in using extra credit in areas that have no content connection to our courses; allowing extra credit for donating blood, for instance, isn't defensible when it comes to assessing our students' performance in our courses. Our assessment should be directly tied to course objectives, and blood donation clearly is not that.

Returning Exams

I have never given an exam which I have not returned to students; all students should be able to take their exams and assess their studying performance in light of where they were successful and where not. That is, if a student missed a question, they should be able to go back and determine what in their study approach failed to work.

I know some of you review exams in class in lieu of returning them to students; I have some concern that this burns up valuable class time as well as not providing students the opportunity to use the exam to go back and assess their studying. Perhaps you overcome this by allowing students to review the exam in your office, but if the purpose of this practice is simply to avoid having to make new exams each time, it opens us up to other issues.

That is, this approach to using the same exam each time depends on absolute certainty that no copy of the exam has leaked out, or that no students have access to the test bank or instructor guide. Please be very careful with this. I had reports last semester of some academic dishonesty on the part of some of our students, which reports I could not substantiate but which I do believe. I had no reports in relation to any particular exam, but we can be sure that if a few students will take liberties in one area, it's likely they'd take them in another.

If our exams are not known to be "pure" in that no student knows what is going to be on them, then we can have issues defending our grading scheme. Let's be sure we don't have these issues.

Group Work

Be careful in how you require group work among students. Unless there is a significant individual component to the group grade, experience indicates that in such groups, the strongest students bear a disproportionate share of the work, as they are the most motivated; weaker students often just hang on the strongest student coattails, earning better grades through the work of other students than they deserve. So it becomes both an equity issue as well as grade inflation issue.

When this happens, our grading schemes come open to criticism. When individual effort is confounded with group results, it isn't as clear what grades mean. I have occasionally used group projects in the past; when I do so, I always use an individual component to the grade, so that students realize that disengaging from the project will not reward them.

If you'd like to explore ways to do this, contact me about it.

Their Money's Worth

I've long used a particular approach to assessing my own teaching. I ask myself, if my own children were in my classes, would I feel they were getting their money's worth? Students pay dearly for every class period in which they are enrolled, so I never want to waste that investment in their education. I always want them to walk out of my classes feeling they received their money's worth for what they received, and a bit more.

REASONS FOR BEING ABSENT

I've been asked what kinds of things are legitimate reasons to miss a class. Of course, illness, or a family member who is ill or for whom we must care or be involved in care, hospitalization, or other related things are legitimate reasons why we must miss a class. Each of us has sick time we can use to accommodate this.

Attending a conference or presenting a paper at a professional meeting is another legitimate reason to miss a class. While it would be nice if these would occur when we don't hold classes, sometimes that's not the case. Maintaining our professional competence is part of our responsibility to our students and this is one way we do that.

Occasionally there may be events which have significant impacts on our students which require us to miss a class. This was something both Pat and Rex experienced in the fall when they went to Madison to deal with issues surrounding the 700-hour academy.

There are ways to deal with this that limit the damage to our students' resulting education. One is to schedule exams during times we must be absent and arranging for proctors to give such exams. I'm available to help with that as are, of course, most of our staff. When that can't happen, perhaps a guest speaker may be scheduled or another faculty member can pinch-hit for us in a topic area in which they have expertise. Finding some way to give our students meaningful educational experiences during their scheduled and paid-for class time should be our priority.

When events provide only short-term opportunities to plan (see the 700-hour academy issues above), that may be difficult, but we should always be striving to give our students what they pay for. I know most of you are diligent in this regard, and I hope the above clarifies this. If you're not sure, talk to me about a proposed absence.

700-HOUR ACADEMY UPDATE

We remain unclear as to the exact ramifications of the 700-hour academy on our students who wish to enter a Law Enforcement career path in Wisconsin--except they don't look good. It makes it more difficult and more expensive for students who do not have an agency sponsorship, and makes it less desirable for students to earn a BS degree prior to entering the academy. Reducing the proportion of our police force who have earned bachelors degrees is not a good thing.

A few of us (Rex Reed, Joe Lomax, Pat Solar and myself) have variously testified at a legislative hearing, met with DOJ training and standards staff, and met with Rep. Bies who is sponsoring the legislation related to this bill. I met yesterday with Representative Travis Tranel to discuss our concerns as well as the degree of cooperation we've received from DOJ.

One option that is being discussed by Rep. Tranel and DOJ is the option of offering an Academy here at UW-Platteville, where students graduating with a BS with a LE emphasis would be certifiable at graduation, rather than after an additional academy. While appearing attractive at one level, the devil is in the details and much would depend on how flexible DOJ is on how the curriculum is presented and instructor staffing--a flexibility they have yet to demonstrate.

I'd like to talk about this a bit at our meeting on Tuesday. Bring ideas and questions.

ROCKFORD UPDATE

The Rockford initiative to offer advanced standing at UW-Platteville to Rockford HS students who complete coursework there prior to admission here is moving forward. We're at the stage where contract is being discussed.

This has the potential to improve the diversity of our students, pre-prepare students who will be well-positioned to succeed here in our program, provide a good recruitment path for maintaining enrollment numbers, and will even provide us with additional funding--which I'd like to use in part to do things like provide releases for research and ways to reduce some of our section sizes.

Assuming we're able to complete this, our first task will be to find someone who can do teaching from Platteville via distance learning methods. I expect such a position to include not only compensation for the year's teaching, but there is also funding for curriculum development and training and coordination with Rockford personnel who will be involved.

If you'd like to be involved with this, please let me know. Developing/converting FI 1320 curriculum for the first year's class is the first order of business.

OK, gang--this is going nowhere fast, and I can't see where spending our time arguing about this is producing anything valuable as we look forward.

Email is a particularly bad venue for certain conversations, and before anyone says anything they're going to regret, I suggest you either meet face-to-face to hash this out, or let it go.

Mike

PS: I excised Amber's email from this list--to carry on this way in front of a student is, at the least, of questionable professionalism.

But, I'm just asking everyone to be mindful about any sexual orientation comments.

To me, the need to draw a greater number of applicants for our openings is the missing element in our processes.

At the beginning, I was not inclined to recommend someone that received two of her three degrees from this institution; however, my decision against her fully coalesced during her lecture. Regarding her positives, she can develop a good relationship with her audience. But several elements of her presentation finally convinced me that she is not ready to join our faculty. First, during her lecture she stated that, "Numbers don't lie." I would be concerned if someone with her understanding of statistics teaches research methods to our students. Secondly, her presentation on ethnicity, race, and gender seemed driven more by a rote recitation of what is in the public sphere than a more critical assessment. Also, I got the impression that she would be better suited to a Criminology environment than a Criminal Justice program based on her several references to Strain Theory. Lastly, she seemed to take more time presenting her background and interests to make that connection with the class rather than providing other content.

> In regards to Stackman, the following are my thoughts and beliefs. I was willing to give her a chance, but she failed during the dinner at Benvenuto's (sp.). First, she is another that obviously has more of a Criminology interest than a Criminal Justice background. She has very little background in Criminal Justice. I think Lorne pointed out she has only eight courses in that field with no experience. All of our graduates have more than that. Secondly, she is heavy into research according to her resume, and I got the feeling during the interviews that she has more of an interest in research than in teaching. How long will she stay with us if indeed she is more interested in a research career. Lastly, and far more influential, I was surprised during our dinner conversations that she went off on a tangent about "bestiality." She clearly said not only that bestiality is legal in the State of Virginia but also that it is common knowledge that students from her school go there because (and this is almost a quote) "because it is legal." She did nothing to dissuade we who were listening from reaching one of two conclusions: (1) that her students freely practice bestiality or (2) that she was entertaining us with West Virginia stereotypes--strange behavior for someone who is being hired to counter stereotypes. Either explanation is unacceptable to me. Lest you think I am making too much of some isolated incident, I remind you one particular claim she made during that part of our conversations. She went on to describe how one of her students has a goat. The student has professed his love for his goat. He even talks about the goat in a given name of "Sally". She claimed that the student talks about how he and Sally will be together forever, implying the declaration was similar to one made for an intimate relationship between a man and a woman. I take this incident to illustrate that Stackman doesn't have the maturity to understand when her students are playing her along. Consider that she teaches in the Bible belt where there are strong currents against homosexuality and probably even more against bestiality. With that kind of communal attitude, I can't see a social norm that bestiality in her community is largely practiced or informally accepted. Until proven otherwise, I have to conclude she doesn't have the critical thought process at this time to be a good addition to this faculty.

I am a product of this program and have the deepest respect for the preparation I received that enabled me to be successful in my career. I graduated from a Criminal Justice program, and I would like it to stay a Criminal Justice program. However, I feel a little uneasy in that I wonder if our program is situated at a point in its history where it is adrift. Our program seems to me to be in a current that runs between the shores of Criminal Justice and Criminology. I hope that I am overly sensitive and I am wrong. Nonetheless, I remain worried that maybe our program is drifting or could easily drift into a Criminology eddy and stay there for a long time. For example, Stackman is clearly more of a research sociologist than someone suited for a Criminal Justice program at a teaching university. Transforming our department into a Criminology program would be a sad end to what was the state's best Criminal Justice program.

Instead, they will benefit from instructors with either a much heavier background in Criminal Justice courses or substantial experience in the Criminal Justice profession. Secondly, we are "...dedicated to providing the expertise of...[our]...faculty as a resource to assist criminal justice and social service agencies in the realms of applied research, policy development, training, and planned change..." If we want to retain our well earned reputation as a widely respected Criminal Justice department, we are better served by having faculty that have a substantial background in the discipline of Criminal Justice. If we change the tone of our faculty, the tone of the program and the product we produce will also change. We have a wide constituency in this state and around the nation. How will they accept the change in our product if we move more to Criminology and research focii?

I have thought all weekend long about the fact Miofsky received 12 points. I know that I gave Miofsky one point, and I asked Lorne what he did. He gave her one point. There are three other members who voted. If each gave Miofsky 3 points, that means Miofsky received 11 points and not 12. That is obviously a simple math error--one that I could have easily made--so I thought now is the time to get the scores on the record. Once I get those, I can close out my file.

> In closing, your email asked why we were opposed to both Nemmetz and Stackman at the end of the screening process and not at the beginning. The answer is simply that one gathers information from the beginning to the end of the process. It wasn't until the end of the process that I made my decision after having all the data available, which included the face-to-face interviews, the guest lectures, and the meals.

Sabina, let this go! There is nothing to be gained by hashing this out on email.

If we're going to spend all our time looking backwards, we're going to bump into things we should have seen coming.

That is obviously a simple math error--one that I could have easily made--so I thought now is the time to get the scores on the record. Once I get those, I can close out my file.

> In closing, your email asked why we were opposed to both Nemmetz and Stackman at the end of the screening process and not at the beginning. The answer is simply that one gathers information from the beginning to the end of the process. It wasn't until the end of the process that I made my decision after having all the data available, which included the face-to-face interviews, the guest lectures, and the meals.

STRATEGIC PLANNING, CURRICULUM REVIEW

WELCOME TO AMY NEMMETZ AND VALERIE STACKMAN!

I'd like you all to join me in welcoming our two new tenure-track hires for the fall semester, Valerie Stackman and Amy Nemmetz. We have verbal acceptances from both of them, and the final contract paperwork may already be approved by the time you read this.

I'm pleased to have them join our staff; they bring approaches and backgrounds that will provide greater diversity of thought, preparation, and experience to our department. I can't tell you how excited I am about this.

NEW SECTION OF CRIMINAL LAW ADDED

In order to provide additional slots for full classes, I've added an additional section of CRIMINAL LAW which will be taught by Judge George Curry. It will meet at the same time as Steve's 9:30-10:48 TR class.

If you have student advisees who were shut out of Crim Law due to sections closing, tell them about the additional section being added. We can also move a few students around to equalize the sections.

DRB FILES DUE JAN 6th

A reminder that DRB files are due January 6th.

700-HOUR ACADEMY UPDATE

Rex, Joe, Pat and Mike traveled to Madison on Thursday to testify at a legislative hearing regarding changes to training and standards related to an increase in the LE Academy from 520 to 700 hours. This proposed change has serious ramifications for our students and our program.

Also traveling with us were students Miles Eichhorn, Kyle Keller, and Andrea (Vaugh) Mullarkey. The three were fabulous—in a potentially threatening environment, cameras on, they met the challenge of telling legislators their stories and how this impacts them—and students like them.

We believe we "got through" on some of the issues surrounding the proposed changes and we're meeting w/ SW Tech Thursday morning to figure out how we can adjust and adapt to them, to best position our students. If you have any thoughts on this or would like to be involved, please let Mike know.

INTERNSHIPS FOR SUMMER

If you would like to supervise one or more internships this summer, please let Mike know.

REMEMBER, FUNDS AVAILABLE

Don't forget, each of you have $500 in professional development funds available. They can be used for attending a conference, purchase of necessary software, books, equipment, and so on—so long as it's related to your performing your job, it's generally considered fair game.

If you have a conference you'd like to attend that requires more than this, let me know—we have some additional funding that can be dedicated to that purpose.

Thank you to Cheryl and the online MSCJ program for these resources!

FALL SCHEDULE

I will have the fall schedule done shortly, now that we know who is filling our two department positions. With the addition of two new faculty members and some additional help with advising, I expect we'll see some breathing room for us.

STRATEGIC PLANNING, CURRICULUM REVIEW

In anticipation of the 2016 Higher Learning Commission re-accreditation I'd like us to do some strategic planning and curriculum review in the spring semester. We can also bring in a couple outside reviewers to give us a view that fresh eyes may provide us. We'll talk more about this when we get back in the Spring.

ADVISORY BOARD

Part of being strategic is having a clear connection to our ultimate customers, the people who hire our students. This includes entities like police departments, loss prevention specialists, private security, probation and parole, corrections, forensic investigation, juvenile services, and so on.

An advisory board composed of about 20 stakeholders would fill the bill. They can help us be up to date on concerns and trends that should infuse our curriculum. Be thinking about people who would be good candidates for such an advisory board.

I agree that there is some sort of odd criteria being used; we can simply note that between ourselves and remember it should any further action be warranted.

At this point, let it go. The paperwork is signed by the dean and I delivered it upstairs for the last signatures. I expect that to happen today or tomorrow, and at that point, the issue is moot.

Remember, once the final signature is in place it is the Dean's prerogative to call them and offer the position. I expect she'll notify us as soon as that happens. I asked Cathy to ask Liz Schaal to let both you and I know when they're signed, so we know where we are in the process.

Looking forward to that notification. :)

I was preparing an email to describe the results of the search to the department, and realized that was a bit premature. Sabina is doing reference checks and until those are completed I'm thinking we should probably hold the results of our meeting close to the vest. I don't want to announce we're hiring a candidate until we reach the Dean's level because something in references might happen, who knows what.

So please keep this close to the vest for now. Until the Dean decides to offer, there's no offer and ultimately, the search isn't complete.

I don't have that number or a card. We'll have to ask Sheri.

Sheri, any idea where we can get this number? I believe it needs to be on a card or other sort of document.

Our last candidate, Dr. Karin Miofsky, is coming in this afternoon.

Her schedule for tomorrow is identical to Dr. Nemmetz' timeline on campus.

Could we meet on Thursday at 2 pm in the small conference room to determine who we want to recommend to the Dean for hiring?

Thank you,

Sabina

We might be able to meet later in the afternoon--it's possible we'd be back by 1:00pm, possible not until 4:00pm. Can't know since ours is the third of three hearings; if the first two have no public input they'd go right to ours. If there is a lot of input, ours will be pushed back.

Thoughts?

Monday Dec. 9, Valerie Stackman: Pick up at Student Center at 12:00pm, deliver to Dr. Fuller's office at 1146 Ullsvik at 1:00pm.

Wednesday Dec 11, Karin Miofsky: Pick up at Dr. Dalecki's office (1174 Ullsvik) at 9:00am, deliver to LAE Dean's office in Gardner at 10:00am.

Components of the tour: Student Center, Pioneer Athletic Center, Center for the Arts, Ullsvik Hall, Doudna Hall, Library, and anything else either you want to show them or they ask to see. Remember, they're prospective faculty, so their interests are a bit different than, say, 17-year-old prospective students.

Hi Valerie!

We're watching the weather forecasts with interest; hoping you can get out of Kentucky in good shape tomorrow.

Part of this system moving across the US is an unusually deep cold snap that's hitting us. I can recently remember golfing in December; now we have this big dome of very cold weather coming, plus they're even talking about snow on Sunday (good reason to get here Saturday).

Anyway, I'm sure you're watching it too, but be sure you have winter clothing, boots, etc. On the other hand, the motel has a pool and hot tub so...

Some phone numbers for contact purposes:

Sabina's Cell: 608-331-0203

Roger's Cell: 608-331-0000 (Roger is Sabina's husband)

My cell: 608-732-7336

My landline: 608-348-8156 (we live in a place where sometimes cell service is weak).

Right now, the plan is for Sabina to pick you up at the airport and bring you back to Platteville. It is the nature of searches that we cannot entertain you from Saturday until we begin Sunday evening, which makes me a bit uncomfortable as a host, but candidates must be treated as similarly as we can. It is what it is.

We do have a taxi service in Platteville, it costs something like $2 or $3 per ride, and you should avail yourself of that service as you need and desire. There are a couple of theatres in town, some good restaurants, so as you feel you want to get out and about, please feel free to do that, keep receipts, and we'll reimburse you for that. Sabina will point those out for you.

We're looking forward to seeing you! Travel safely!

I'd like to see something about teaching there--since one candidate appeared to have an over-reliance on student presentations, videos and such, I'd like to give them an opportunity to correct it.

A couple tweaks:

1. What do you consider to be the toughest tasks in a classroom today? How do you plan to address them?
How about "How do you address them?"

I'm still not sure what this means:

1. How have you incorporated writing and presentation skills in the courses you have taught?
Does it mean writing assignments for students? Students doing presentations? Instructors doing powerpoints?

Perhaps just make it "how do you incorporate student writing in your courses?"

And with this one, it just has a bit of a tone about it:

1. What have you done that might give us an indication of your ability to successfully develop a new course?
Suggest changing to "What kind of course, if you could develop your dream course related to CJ, would you like to develop?"

The teaching thing might be subsumed in the second one--are you trying to get at how much the instructor uses student presentations in the classroom? Maybe I'm misunderstanding it.

W/R/T the confidentiality agreement: it states that once finalists are chosen, committee members may discuss w/ other members of the department, so in this instance, I don't see any violation of confidentiality.

Will Amber be able to make that? Or does her training (assuming she gets her job) not start until next week? I can't recall.

The presentation time is...odd. On MWF students will have to miss both the 2pm and 3pm classes to make this. May make sense to have it start at 3pm so she has time to gather herself prior to the presentation. I'd spread it out in the afternoon a bit more.

It also seems like there's something else missing...Might be town tour. Does Amy live here in town?

The other thing is meeting w/ Cheryl--others might ask for a private meeting.

The meeting w/ Sheri needs to be just her, so she can get any reimbursements going, etc. Of course, with Amy there may be none. :) Best thing we can do is try to create parallelism between the three interviews, which means if we can, do dinner on Tues night. I know I have that thing in Madison, but I think I'd be back by 6pm.

Still, our search should not be discussed outside the committee, and me.

Do you remember specifically what files Aric was reviewing? Were they candidate files for your search?

When Lorne said "there weren't any qualified candidates" was he referring to your search or the FI search?

I think I like the first one a bit better:

1. Discuss how race and ethnicity are central to understanding crime and criminal justice in America.

Each candidate should have the same topic.

I agree, the sooner Amy knows the better.

I just couldn't for the life of me recall what we'd decided. I didn't write it down--that was a mistake.

It would be best if we can have someone pick them up at the airport. Amy won't matter, obviously, but I've always thought we should conduct ourselves such that we show them how much we want them--and treat them both as an interviewee and a guest.

The other two candidates--Valerie and Karin--should work out ok.

We're doing well! The only issue right now is having Amber hopefully be able to meet with the students.

1. I have that Social Change class on TR from 9:30-10:48 on Thursday Dec 5 and Tuesday Dec 10. On December 12th I have to meet it at 8am because I have to go to Madison for the public hearing on the new Training and Standards bill. I think we talked about being done w/ interviews by then, but that's a very bad day for me. I think this was subsumed in the things we talked about w/r/t scheduling but just in case it wasn't. Rex is very likely to be going to Madison with me that day, too.
2. If scheduling with Amy next week is problematic, we could have her meet w/ the dean late on Thursday afternoon since the dean isn't going to be there on Friday, and then do the rest of it on Friday.
3. Can't remember if I told you this but on Tuesday Dec 3 we are going to Madison to meet /w legislators and staffers about the Training and Standards bill. I'll have to meet my Social Change class early that day and then bug out. I don't think we were doing anything with Amy during the day, can't recall if you had her starting that evening or not.

Thanksgiving Week Student Help Meeting on Training and Standards

Thanksgiving Week

Faculty and staff are reminded that the university is open until 5pm on Wednesday; all classes should meet as per normal, and no cancellations due to "Thanksgiving" will occur. Thank you.

Student Help

While we cannot use them for grading or teaching, if there is work that you could use a Work-Study student to do (one assigned to you, not a pool student), please let me know. I'd like to see us pull out some of our best students, pay them as assistants, and have them help relieve some of your burden if we can make this work.

I'm thinking 5-10 hours per week. No picking up laundry, no washing cars, but if you have work-related things a good undergraduate can help you with (research, setting up a lab, working with students, whatever), please let me know. Even better if you have identified such a student. Prerequisite: they need to have a good GPA and be a CJ or FI student. Sophomore or above.

If you know of any GRADUATE students in house with whom you could work, let's talk.

Meeting on Training and Standards

Last week Wednesday Rex Reed, Pat Solar and I traveled to Madison to the Training and Standards meeting addressing the change in curriculum for LE Academy. The proposed new curriculum totals 700 hours, which cannot be done in a summer as previous. This seriously disadvantages our students and programs at a number of levels, and we have been discussing ways to alter the trajectory.

Below is an email I sent to folks at UW-Parkside, UW-Oshkosh, and Viterbo detailing the results of that meeting:

Today's meeting with the Training and Standards went about as I expected, which means they demonstrated little apparent interest in our concerns about the consequences of a 700-hour Academy on our CJ graduates.

Our position to them was that there is a great deal of redundancy between what we teach here at UW-Platteville (and by extension, at the other 4-year schools in Wisconsin graduating CJ majors) and what is taught in the Academy.

We argued that if students could pass the proficiency exams they expected their own students to pass, that our students would have met the requirements. This went over like the proverbial lead balloon. They argued that all their content must be taught by their own certified instructors, after which the proficiency exams would be applied. We could not get them to either agree or apparently understand that the outcome measure that is important is the quality of the students we graduate, and that if they students could pass the proficiency exams, the instruction would by definition be adequate.

Their argument was that they taught the content just prior to the hands-on elements of the training, such that learning about warrants, for example, would occur just before learning how to execute one.

Given the increase in cost which students will bear, the increased time during which they will have no job, our concern is that many students will opt out of the 4-year experience and simply complete a 2-year Associate's degree. We cannot see how this enhances the quality of police officers in the State of Wisconsin, given the increasingly complex environment in which policing is done.

The only bright spot of the day is that they appear to be backing down somewhat on the physical requirements. While we don't know what those will eventually be, it appears they are moving in a less-onerous direction.

Our next step here is to make our case to other state stakeholders. We believe that there is room for both a 700-hour academy as well as a shortened academy, at say approximately 500+ hours, in which college graduates with proficiency in areas like constitutional law, interviewing, criminal justice theory, definition of crime, crime scene investigation, and the like, would be able to complete the requirements with credit for our work in the 4-year schools.

I saw it. I may be back earlier than I thought this pm.

Proceed with the Skype interviews. The time to discuss this was at the beginning not in the middle of the process. Dr. Gibson may choose to participate or not, as he elects.

It has been clear from the beginning that we needed to replace what Joe is teaching and that competence in teaching those areas, specifically crime/class/race, is what we need.

Let us proceed to find just such a person. Dr. Gibson's apparent belief that such a person can only be found in certain disciplines is just that, his belief. He has no veto power over the process simply because he disagrees.

Hi everyone,
It is now very clear we are a little bit dysfunctional as a result of the department not doing what it was suppose to do. That is decide on the qualifications and hiring priorities of the tenure-track position we're charged with. And since it was recommended that we take this process seriously, it would be a good idea to hold off with skype interviews until we get a handle on what and how exactly we are rating candidates. With that, I will get us started by submitting the attached qualifications,corresponding weights, and dimensions/indicators.

For me

Priority 1 is a criminal justice faculty member that can effectively advise future criminal justice professionals and effectively teach and enhance a broad range of criminal justice subject areas.

Priority 2, 3, 4 is a criminal justice faculty member that can cordially collaborate with and assist a significant amount of colleagues here in the department, with an outside agency or more, and possibly undertake in research of significance.

Lastly, it is a bonus if they have grant/funding potential or significant qualifications for race/minority courses.

Let me suggest some others like this:

Suggested Skype questions:

1. Why do you believe the position here at UW-Platteville is a good fit for you?
2. What is your philosophy of teaching?
3. Traditionally, this is a relatively non-diverse campus. How would you bring diversity into the classroom?
4. What experience have you had with teaching a race/class/crime course, and how would you approach teaching it?
6. What courses, related to your areas of expertise, would you be interested in developing?
7. Please describe a difficult situation or interaction with a student, and how you resolved it.
8. What future research projects would you like to pursue?
9. Do you have anything else you would like to share with us, or have us consider, relative to this position?
10. Do you have any questions for us?

I would like to remind you that this is a serious process and that the parameters of the search must be adhered to.

That means, for starters, that any candidate who does not have a PhD or is not expected to receive one in the time frame indicated in the search advertisement, is not a candidate for this position.

That is not negotiable. Further, you should be prepared to defend your ratings of candidates when they differ from others' ratings. Finally, it is better to have too many candidates than to have too few. That means, when it comes to Skyping interviewees, that an additional half hour or hour of time can pay large dividends.

I've scanned the list of candidates and it seems clear to me that there are at least six deserving of careful consideration, perhaps as many as nine. And that is from a casual examination of them.

Again, I remind you--this is a serious process. If any of you find that you cannot devote the time necessary to this very important departmental duty, please let me know and we'll see if I can find a replacement.

A reminder that if you'd like to attend at least part of the Restorative Justice conference Friday, to get your registration in as soon as you can.

Remember, each faculty and staff member has a $500 professional development budget to devote to things like this, so it doesn't come out of your pocket. There is a catered lunch included in the cost.

Webinar Overview

Classroom observations are often used as part of the faculty evaluation process. Generally, the observations are conducted at the end of the term with the sole purpose of completing required evaluation forms. However, if institutions are focused on learning, the intent of observations must shift from an evaluation tool to a valuable set of experiences designed to support faculty and improve the quality of teaching and learning. This webinar will introduce an ongoing observation program that contributes not only to learning, but also to the professional development of academic leaders and faculty. Implementing this type of program enables them to recognize and reinforce good practice, to identify ways of improving teaching and learning, and to highlight practice that should be shared more widely. In all these ways it contributes directly to the quality of the students' learning and experience at the institution. Participants will also develop critical skills needed to provide specific and actionable feedback following a walk-through classroom observation.

Webinar Objectives Participants will:

- * Identify steps needed to adapt and implement a walk-through classroom observation system
- * Develop critical skills needed to provide specific and actionable feedback following a walk-through classroom observation
- * Introduce research-based, field-tested "tools and techniques" that deans and chairs can employ to facilitate an effective classroom observation program focused on improved student learning

Writing Emphasis Requirement

From : Mike Dalecki <dalecki@uwplatt.edu>

Subject : Writing Emphasis Requirement 1 attachmentTo : Sabina Burton <burtons@uwplatt.edu>, banachoc <banachoc@uwplatt.edu>, Tom Caywood <caywood@uwplatt.edu>, Dutellea <Dutellea@uwplatt.edu>, Rex R Byberg-Reed <reedre@uwplatt.edu>, Lorne Gibson <gibsonlo@uwplatt.edu>, Patrick Solar <solarp@uwplatt.edu>, Diana Johnson <johnsondi@uwplatt.edu>, Deborah L Rice <ricede@uwplatt.edu>, Dana L Cecil <cecild@uwplatt.edu>, Edward Ross <rosse@uwplatt.edu>, Steven Elmer <elmerst@uwplatt.edu>, Mike Dalecki <dalecki@uwplatt.edu>, Joe Lomax <lomaxj@uwplatt.edu>

As you may know, the university is moving toward requiring 6 credits of Writing Emphasis courses for graduation.

I have attached the announcement and requirements for submitting a course for Writing Emphasis.

While it is not required that anyone do this in our department, we may find after a while that CJ students have difficulty scheduling coursework that meets the 6-credit requirement. Thus, having some of those courses "in house" will be helpful.

The requirement isn't as onerous as you might imagine; see the attached for the specifics. Further, it is understood that to offer a Writing Emphasis course, enrollment will be less than a typical CJ course. We're probably looking at a max enrollment in the area of 24 students to do something like this.

If you would like to offer one or more of your courses as Writing Emphasis courses, please look through the attached information and let me know as well. I suspect that we'll find student enrollment to be more from the upper half of the student distribution, and the smaller enrollment will make for a more intimate classroom environment.

Thanks Sabina. Take whatever time you need. If it goes longer we can make some arrangements to fill in for you, get some colleague coverage.

My name is John Davis. Thank you for recently sending me the job ad regarding the tenure-track Assistant Professor position. I am interested in applying for the job but I have a question.

I have twenty years of police experience including work as an administrator and with the DEA Task Force(two years). I also have six graduate hours and am a graduate of the University of Louisville's Southern Police Institute, and also the DEA's National Drug Enforcement Academy. (Sorry for the lengthy commentary)

My doctorate is in history, which included some study of British policing. Would my advanced degree, bachelors in criminal justice and several years collegiate level teaching experience qualify me for consideration? I have considered applying to Cincinnati and other local universities for criminal justice graduate work, including here at Ohio State.

Thank you very much for any advice you might offer and sorry for the length of this email.

I think the issue is more of whether you fit the requirements of the position, i.e., the subjects that we need taught as part of that position. In my opinion--and while I'm the department chair I'm not on the committee except as ex officio--you'd need to have background teaching race/gender as it pertains to crime.

I'd also suggest contacting the search chair Dr. Burton (I've copied her on this email) and get her view on it.

Let's be careful, as you do this, that you follow the protocol of rating the candidates in an objective fashion and assessing them as a committee. It is an important part of searching for faculty that a deliberation take place so that those who think well of a candidate can make their case, and those who think poorly of a candidate can also explain why. There has been more than one occasion where I have changed my mind based on what others saw in a candidate. Further, sometimes candidates are included I don't think much of--and often they do one of two things: either they rise to the top, or they confirm the opinion of other candidates.

I'm copying Sabina on this email so as to put the two of you in contact with each other. Sabina knows more about this subject than anyone else here, and has students interested in the topic--she's the natural connection here, and she has students who are interested. We talked about how we might do an internship, and there are certainly options there.

I will still put out a BOLO (our all-student email communication :) with any blurb you'd like me to include so as to cast our nets more widely, but in the meantime, Sabina is an excellent place to start.

Finding Ways to Release Faculty/Staff
Rockford's a Go
Horror Crime Scene Revisited
Fall, 2014 Scheduling

Finding Ways to Release Faculty/Staff

One thing that has struck me in the two-plus months I've been here is that our faculty work as hard or harder as any on campus. Between overloads, advising huge numbers of students, grading writing proficiency exams--we do a lot.

We have some resources available which we could devote to methods to relieve some of the load. I'm thinking about not only things like possibly teaching assistants but other methods to relieve the advising burden. Joe Lomax and Ben Lilligard are working on that this fall, and we're hopeful we can come up with a model that will do that.

If you have any ideas how we can devote resources to release faculty/staff from some of these loads, please let me know.

Rockford's a Go

I received word last night that the Rockford initiative--where high school students would take FI and CJ classes as juniors and seniors and then earn advanced standing here at UW-Platteville, is a go.

We were put under a severe time crunch to get a proposal in; I consulted a number of you about it, and the model has students, as Juniors, taking FI 1320 Intro to Crime Scene Investigation; Seniors in their fall semester would take FI 2420, Evidence Collection and Preservation, and in their spring semester would take CJ 1130 Intro to Criminal Justice. This would provide students with up to 8 credits of advanced standing. I expect the first offering to be in Fall, 2014.

This is an important initiative for several reasons--it should help improve the diversity of our student populations, it is a recruitment source for us, will help us maintain enrollments as demographic trends change, and it broadens our recruitment area. There is even interest in looking to expand this model to Iowa and Wisconsin, and to other programs.

Horrific Crime Scene Revisited

Just a reminder (as if you needed it), the Horrific Crime Scene Revisited is this coming Wednesday from 12-8pm at the FISCH house. This year, Diana Johnson and Dana Cecil are working with the Criminal Justice Association to put on this masterpiece. It seems like a nice bookend for CJA to be involved in this--Career Fair in the spring, HCSR house in the fall.

Fall 2014 Scheduling

Before long, Fall 2014 scheduling will be upon us. If you have a change you'd like to make in time or room to something you're doing now, or there are specific issues you'd like to see if we can address, let me know.

I certainly can encourage students to attend, but requiring it is a bit problematic. We could put up a signup sheet on our bulletin board and get students that way. We have 950 combined majors; getting 30 shouldn't be a problem.

I would be happy to attend and either offer questions from the audience or, even, play a disruptive role. Heck, that last part should come easy. :)

Mike,

What is the salary range for the CJ position? The public service career site requires that info. Ad is 295.- for 90 days.

Cheryl, would you show these to Patrick, so he knows what the course looks like? The way it works, there are five targets. The one with the red post is the "stop plate." The competition is that one points the pistol at the cone as a ready position and at the beep of the timer, you have to shoot all five targets as fast as you can (10 rounds in the gun--so if you use 10 rounds to get all 5 targets, that's OK. Eight rounds fast is better than five rounds slow :).

The last target you hit has to be the stop plate. There's some sort of signal sent from the stop plate to the timer which stops the time.

We do this three times on each stage, and count the two best times. Times four stages. Lowest total time wins.

Sabina, you have this so you can see what Roger was shooting at. :)

Pat, I hope we can find a fifth--between the two Patricks, Roger, and myself, that's only 4 of us.

Subject : Search advertising--

To : Cheryl BanachowskiFuller <banachoc@uwplatt.edu>, Sabina Burton <burtons@uwplatt.edu>

I spoke with Cathy Kutka yesterday and asked her about the places we were advertising--and there may be a misunderstanding here.

There are two or three places they place ads for us--but everything else, the committee is responsible for doing. They place ads in the Chronicle, but in something like the American Criminal Justice Association (or whatever)--that's on us.

Thus, any place we said we'd advertise that we forwarded to Cathy--that they aren't doing--is on us. We might need to devote some money to that need. Last year in the search that produced Claudine Pied, the Social Sciences department spend, IIRC, about $1250 in advertising fees in places like the American Sociological Association.

We have budget to do this. I suspect this is why our application numbers aren't at the level I would expect. If we have already put ads out in all the places we indicated on our recruitment plan, let's find other places we might do this. For instance, the American Sociological Association is one such place we should be advertising.

So--would each of you please place at the top of your list to get those ads out in the places we need them? And let's review where those ads are going, and supplement them if we need to. Start with a presumed budget for each of you of $1250.

Thank you!

I'm glad to see this going forward.

As a suggestion: I'd encourage you to make sure your probationary faculty member knows about the TLC "mid-term evaluation" possibilities. Mid-term evaluations are produced for them by the TLC and are only seen by the faculty member, not the chair and not the DRB. They're a way for faculty to improve outside the evaluation process.

I have found them helpful in the past, and I'm using it again this semester in a new course I'm teaching. As a general rule, end-of-semester student evaluations improve as a result of using mid-term evaluations. Faculty whose student evaluations (question 10) are not routinely and mostly in the "4" range or higher should be looking seriously at this and other methods of improving their teaching.

Hello all,

Sheri called me and let me know that her knee surgery went well and that the doctor was able to repair her damaged meniscus. She expects to be back on Monday.

Perhaps we could get Sheri some flowers? I'd be happy to buy a bouquet in the name of CJ faculty & staff and have a get-well-card for her that everyone can sign on Monday morning.

ALUMNI FORUM
SW TECH CHALLENGE--and SKID CARS

ALUMNI FORUM

The Alumni hosted Friday by the CJ department and Joe Lomax was a great success. Joe's introduction of the alumni was priceless--I wish I'd recorded it. I enjoyed listening to the alumni present their career journeys as well as what they had learned along the way. In my class today I passed along a few of those lessons.

I wish more faculty and students had been able to attend. These alumni are our links to the past, as well as to the future. Everything we can do to encourage and enhance our relationships with alumni is a good thing for our department, our students and our reputation.

Here's to our alumni!

SW TECH CHALLENGE--and SKID CARS

Tom Kretschman proposed a few dates and ones that should work for us are (all Tuesdays):

- 10/22 5pm
- 10/29 5pm
- 11/5 5pm

There will be practice tomorrow nite (10/8), and the course will be set up on 10/15 for us to try out. I'm going up tomorrow nite, if anyone wants to ride along, let me know.

SKID CARS: SW Tech also has some "skid cars" with very slick tires designed to act like the cars are hitting black ice and the like--and we have an opportunity to try them out and learn about them. Tom says "It would probably work best, depending on how many of your staff want to try them, to aim for a late afternoon start (3:30-4:30pm start) in order to beat the darkness this time of year."

If you'd like to see how they work, and even try them, please let me know. We can get a carpool going.

Unfortunately, several of our shooters cannot make the October 26th date, so Tom proposed some other dates as below (all Tuesday evenings).

If you want to shoot and there's a date you cannot make, please let me know.

Also, a couple of you indicated an interest in the skid cars. Tom is checking on that.

We will start shooting at 5pm, but we can run people through anytime between about 5pm-7pm.

I am not sure what the availability is for our shooters (though I do know that 2 will not be available on these dates due to their schedules)

Another possibility, though not as ideal, would be to have multiple dates and the shooter can just pick one date to shoot the course and we can record that result for the overall team standings. This does not generate the same competitive environment, but this is what I am doing for the Sheriff's department this fall. Just a possibility.

I am checking with Kris on the skid cars and what options we have available.

Let me know if those dates work, and if not, I will see what else we can come up with.

Thanks,
Tom

FULL TIME FACULTY/STAFF HAVE $500 in DEVELOPMENT MONEY AT THEIR DISPOSAL

Thanks to a serious amount of funding coming to the department from the online Masters program, each full-time faculty member and staff will have $500 at their disposal for personal professional development, items they need to purchase to do their job, travel, whatever.

This money can be used for anything related to your job performance: membership in a professional society, travel money to a conference, even something like a whiteboard for your office (I did this last year in my old office). As long as you can demonstrate how its expenditure either helps you with professional development or otherwise helps you do your job, that money is yours to invest in your career as you please. The money expires at the end of the semester; we will not expect to do carryovers unless, e.g., a conference is in the summer. Physical items will remain the property of the University.

I'm expecting we can do something like this each year into the future; it's how the Social Sciences department does it, though their allocations per faculty are less.

I will review requests but don't expect to need to do much unless you're ordering beer or some other difficult-to-defend expenditure. :) And as far as computers or Ipads or some such: there are administrative hurdles to jump through, and such items would remain the property of the University. If that's something that would help you, let's talk about it and see if there's a way to make it happen.

ADDITIONAL MONEY FOR OTHER PROJECTS

I also expect we will have additional money for other development projects or department expenditures that exceed what would be doable under the $500 limit. If, for instance, you are attending a conference to present a paper and additional travel money is desired, let me know. We can supplement for specific professional development activities.

SOUTHWEST TECH CHALLENGE

The details have been nailed down. We're being challenged on Saturday October 26th at the Southwest Tech Fennimore facility. The UWP Sportsmen's Club Pistol Team is shooting that morning starting at 9:00am; Tom Kretschman tells me that we'd shoot the challenge after that, and he expects it would all be done by noon.

Here's the setup: there are four "courses" each composed of 5 steel targets. Each shooter has 10 rounds with which to hit those five targets as quickly as possible, starting at a "low ready" position (no holster). From the "beep" the job is to get those 5 targets in the shortest time. It doesn't matter how many rounds, five or ten; what matters is the speed they're knocked down at.

Each shooter will do that three times per course, and their "high" time will be dropped, leaving them 2 times per course, or 8 total times. The final tally is the total of those 8 scores.

The course will be set up for practice on Tuesday Oct. 15th and Oct. 22nd. We can carpool up there as desired.

From each squad, the top five shooters' scores will count toward the trophy. I also noted that we'd draw from family members as well. Thus, there's no particular concern about pressure; if we have 8 or 9 shooters, still only the best 5 shooters will count.

I hope we can get a lot of people to do this--it'll be fun, and why not?

We have a couple aces in the hole in the Patricks, Solar and Fuller. And maybe a few others (not me).

I spoke w/ Cathy Kutka late yesterday, and she indicated that our ads were going out in the standard outlets. We need to be sure the ad is in the other outlets that we mentioned, and as soon as we can do that.

Cathy also mentioned her willingness to do a brief, 15-20 minute presentation to the search committees regarding the TAM system. All apps are now required to be electronic, and manipulating that system is not rocket science, just a little different. I recommend you schedule Cathy to meet with your committees so as to streamline the process.

I also asked about whether diversity advocates had been appointed. Not as of yet, but I think they're close. She is, btw, impressed with the speed with which you are doing this.

Related to that, the best advice I had last year when I ran the search which culminated in the hire of Claudine Pied came from Cathy. She urged me to have Mary Kurth, our Program Assistant, handle the day-to-day tasks of getting letters of reference in the right place when they came in to us instead of where they should have been sent, check on whether candidates had met all the application requirements, and so on. It was a godsend, and I suggest you consider having Sheri do that for you.

SEARCHES APPROVED

SEARCHES APPROVED

Our two searches are moving apace. We have had FORM 2 approval granted for both searches, and are looking to have applicant review well under way by the end of October.

99+ PERCENT OF PROBLEMS CAN BE HANDLED LOCALLY

Sometimes we forget that most problems can be solved, quickly and relatively painlessly, by nothing more than sitting down and talking about them. Approaching conflict as if it were akin to lawyers battling in front of a jury rarely works well, and sometime escalates conflict to a place we'd rather not go.

I believe that 99+ percent of problems can be remedied quickly by simply talking. If we have an issue, let's get it out there and discuss it. Sit down with whomever you have an issue and work it out. Most times, a perceived slight or personal disagreement can be handled locally and sometimes, it's just a misperception. We can agree to disagree without being disagreeable.

Please respect the chain of command; administrative higher-ups may tend to look askance at those who cannot or will not honor it. Remember that when we choose to move up the chain, it's not only about what we say, it also reflects on those who are saying it. Make sure, should you ever choose to do that, you are willing to accept how you might look to others.

Generally, decisions made are simply that--decisions taken without any kind of malice aforethought. I haven't agreed with every decision administrators have thrust on me. I also don't always know all the considerations that went into the decision but, in the end, it's not my call. We have to respect that or we don't have an organizational structure--we have a rabble. And we are not a rabble.

You all are doing great things--we have terrific students, you work very hard and that speaks well to the reputation we have of putting students first. In fact, that is the first element of our mission statement: providing our majors with the best possible education in criminal justice. I think about that every day--and about the people who make it happen.

Go Pioneers! And CJ/FI!

CELEBRATION BOARDS
 CRIME SCENE HOUSE
 SOUTHWEST TECH CHALLENGE

 CELEBRATION BOARDS

You may have noticed two new bulletin boards outside the CJA Office. I want us to be able to celebrate our accomplishments, one board for faculty and staff, the other for our students. These are ways for us to demonstrate not only our ability and commitment, but to present the quality of our "product" to others.

If you know someone whose accomplishments you'd like to celebrate, write up a 1-page-max, 8 1/2 x 11 max, page describing same. Include pictures if you have them, a head shot if you have it, dates, and so on. Send it on to me for possible inclusion. If you are not sure, talk to me ahead of time.

Relevant types of celebrations:

Being honored by an association or group (such as Rex being honored by the Alumni Association).
 Publishing a peer-reviewed paper.
 Presenting a paper at a conference.
 Leading a student group overseas.
 Directing a significant PACCE project.
 Students doing a significant PACCE project.
 Student associations directing significant projects (CJ Fair, Crime Scene House, e.g.)
 Students being honored for their accomplishments.

I'm sure this will evolve over time, and hopefully we end up with far more than for which we have room, but it's a start. When someone does something great, let's get them up on the board!

 CRIME SCENE HOUSE

What with the difficulties of managing the additional duties they have this fall, Diana Johnson and Dana Cecil came up with a brilliant idea for doing the Crime Scene House without killing themselves in the process: they've enlisted the CJA to help do it.

This works on lots of levels, not the least of which is the students owning the process and the success. Diana and Dana will still supervise, but students will hold the major responsibility. This is a great bookend project to the CJ fair held each spring and put on by the CJA.

 SOUTHWEST TECH CHALLENGE

I have a bit more information about the Southwest Tech challenge. They propose a course with four stations, five targets per station. Each participant will have 10 shots to knock down the five targets. The faster, the better. If you use 10 shots in 6 seconds that's better than 5 shots in 8 seconds.

The range at Southwest Tech is open on Tuesdays, including tonight, for the next few weeks. A little practice ahead of time may be in order. I will negotiate a condition of competition where we count the five best (or some such) from each side, so even if you're not sure how good you'll be, you can still have some fun doing it.

Pat Solar and I went up there a couple weeks ago. Among the things I learned: he's pretty good. Me? Not as much. :) I'm heading up tonite again if anyone wants to ride along.

Mike,

I am a member of the DRB and was so in Jan. 2013. I want to have this nomination of Rex Reed repealed. We, as the DRB, did not make the nomination. Therefore, it does not reflect the consensus of the CJ DRB.

I hereby request a CJ department meeting and a DRB meeting with Lizzy Gates present as our former DRB chair. A probationary faculty member who has been employed for just 6 months does not qualify for this prestigious award! I want an investigation to determine whether documents were falsified or if someone without authorization spoke in the name of the CJ DRB and nominated Rex Reed.

Thanks,

Sabina

One of the resources available to us as instructors is a process known as "mid-term evaluations."

This process allows you to "take the temperature" of a class at approximately the mid-term point of the semester. The Teaching and Learning Center offers this service where they will come in, administer a mid-term evaluation to your class, and provide you with the results.

Nobody else in the department will be privy to the results; not me, not the DRB, nobody. They are yours to use how you see fit.

As a rule, I've found overall end-of-semester evaluations tend to improve when faculty avail themselves of this option and listen to the results. If you have a class that is a particularly "sticky wicket" for you, midterm evals can provide valuable insight.

I've used them in the past and they were helpful in identifying areas I could improve.

I am going to use a Midterm Eval this fall in my Sustainability course; it's a new course, I'm doing some different things, and I want to see if I should be making any mid-course corrections. For me, it's a diagnostic and a way to engage in continuous quality improvement.

If you would like to do this, please contact BJ Reed, director of the TLC and she will work with you on it. Her email is reedb@uwplatt.edu, her phone number is 342-1798.

Here are some thoughts:

I'd remove the "J.D. Law Degree" thing. They need a PhD. Period. I don't think we need to say what non-PhD degrees don't qualify; none of them do.

How about "ABDs will be considered for the position but they must have defended their dissertation prior to the start of the contract period if hired." When we hired in our department last year, we decided we didn't want anyone who was still working on their dissertation; it distracts them from what we want them to do here. What do you think? Will it limit our pool too much to do that?

How about something like "The successful applicant will have a strong record of teaching and will have background in cultural awareness, race, ethnicity and crime issues."

As far as the research side, I'd think anyone having done a dissertation would qualify w/r/t university research experience. Might be able to remove that.

I'm wondering about the "university service" part; someone working on their dissertation probably has little or none.

Your thoughts?

BTW, I spoke w/ Tim Zauche today about their search for a SRES tenure track faculty member, and he said that they had to have the advertisements "out there" only about 15 days before they could start reviewing applications.

I bring this up because we may be able to move ahead more quickly than I'd hoped. If that's so, and we can get approvals, it seems almost like we could possibly be looking at on-campus interviews...maybe even before Thanksgiving? Or at worst, right after?

This is a reminder of the faculty meeting on Tuesday morning at 7am in the conference room.

As per our bylaws and given that this meeting involves personnel issues, only ranked faculty are involved.

The agenda for the meeting is short:

FACULTY MEETING, SEPTEMBER 17, 7:00am

1. Faculty recommendation to Dean Throop regarding department chair search.

2. Adjourn

Any votes taken in the meeting will be by paper ballot. Based on my understanding of the open meetings law in the State of Wisconsin, and despite the fact we are discussing personnel issues, I can see no reason why this specific meeting would be closed to the public. Anyone not involved in the meeting may be there if they like. However, this is a meeting of the faculty, not of the entire department faculty and staff.

See you bright and early Tuesday morning. I'm going to try to bring donuts again.

I agree--we need to work to replace the expertise Joe brought in that area, plus add additional competencies as we can use them. I'm not convinced such a person "will be required" to teach on-line; rather, they may. I'd rather not limit us in requiring online teaching; let's get someone good, and if later teaching online is something we might wish to move toward we can work on that.

Hi Mike,

Attached are the announcements that I had for the Criminal Justice and Forensic Sciences position searches. I have made comments in both, but the Criminal Justice document in particular has highlighted text because I had found two different versions. What is highlighted is the text that differed based on the position qualifications/requirements.

I'm also attaching a spreadsheet with the positions in the CJ department, a listing of US institutions with CJ programs, a listing of HBCUs, and a listing of HSI's. The positions listed in the spreadsheet are sorted by pay basis, primarily because we wouldn't assign an open position for a summer appointment to a search. The open positions list the last person to hold that position; filled are, of course, currently filled by the person listed. The list of CJ programs does not include contact information at this time, although it's something I will have our student employee work on for the future. Also, it appears that none of the HBCUs offer above a master's degree in criminal justice, but there is an HSI institution that has a doctoral program in Forensic Psychology as well as Criminal Justice. I also added a quick spreadsheet with sites on which I had found other CJ/Forensics openings. The number of openings and the price may have changed since I last looked.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Cathy.

Search for FI Position:

Cheryl Fuller, Chair

Tom Caywood

Diana Johnson

Pat Solar

Search for CJ Position:

Sabina Burton, Chair

Rex Reed

Lorne Gibson

DEPARTMENT MEETING, TUESDAY SEPT 10, 7AM
SW TECH CHALLENGE
VISIT TO SW TECH TOMORROW EVENING

DEPARTMENT MEETING, TUESDAY SEPT 10, 7AM

As a reminder, we have a meeting of the department at 7:00am tomorrow morning in the conference room. I'm working on coffee and donuts. No guarantees. :)

The agenda is short in items; the primary purpose of the meeting is Dean Throop will be joining us to explain how many and how searches will proceed. I expect we will be finished by 7:45 or so.

SW TECH CHALLENGE

We have been challenged by the Southwest Tech faculty to a competition with pistol shooting. The specifics of that are forthcoming but it will revolve around some sort of dynamic environment, reactive targets, timed courses, like that.

I noted to Kris Wubben that I was unsure if we could field a large enough team given theirs and our faculty numbers, and suggested we may have to include "family members" on our team to make numbers. She readily agreed (cue evil cackle). More details will follow, but if you're interested in this, please let me know. There's no real requirement of skill level; rather, I think this could be fun, we might make a few friends, and why not?

I may propose that everyone participate but we only count the scores of the top five or ten, something like that, so nobody should feel like the honor of the criminal justice department falls squarely on their shoulders.

VISIT TO SW TECH RANGE TOMORROW EVENING

Pat Solar and I are heading up to Fennimore to SW Tech's range to do some scouting out and shooting tomorrow evening. They'll have some of the "course" set up and we're going to try it, maybe get some idea of what, specifically, they're doing up there. It's going to be fun!

If you'd like to ride along and participate, we have room. What you need is your pistol, ammo, hearing and eye protection. I expect to leave about 4:15pm from our parking lot if you want to ride along, or you can drive up yourself if that works better. Let me know.

According to our bylaws, the department must constitute a DRB for promotion and tenure purposes. The department chair sits on that committee as a non-voting member. Additionally, there is a tenure committee composed of the tenured members of the department.

Given that we now have four tenured members of the department, I am now constituting that committee, composed of Cheryl Fuller, Sabina Burton, Tom Caywood, and Aric Dutelle. I ask that the four of you, in consultation with me, set a time for an initial meeting; at that time, the committee will elect a DRB chair and then proceed with the administrative tasks of the DRB. It would be good if we can get that arranged ASAP but failing that, we can discuss it at Tuesday morning's department meeting.

DEPT MEETING Tuesday 9/10, 7:00am
TRIP TO SW TECH
WE'VE BEEN CHALLENGED

DEPT MEETING Tuesday 9/10, 7:00am
Dean Liz Throop would like to meet with us regarding searches, future directions, and as part of ongoing conversations in the department. Adjunct faculty teaching only a course or two do not need to attend unless they would like to do that. We'll meet in the conference room, 1136 Ullsvik. I will see what I can do about coffee and donuts.

TRIP TO SW TECH

On Friday, Diana Johnson, Rex Reed, Pat Solar and I took an early-morning trip to Southwest Tech to visit with faculty there--Tom Kretschman and Kris Wubbens. We had a nice tour of their facility--Pat says there's nothing like it in Illinois--which is, in a word, impressive. Everything from classrooms to the ranges is amazing. There is some interest in partnering with us as the Academy requirements are being increased from 520 hours to 680 hours, which makes it impossible for our UW-Platteville students to do it in a summer. Perhaps there are ways we can help or partner with them. Interesting possibilities.

WE'VE BEEN CHALLENGED

Kris Wubbens of SW Tech threw down a gauntlet, asking if we might be willing to have a little competition on the ranges between their instructors and our department. Of course, I immediately defended our honor, indicating that we wouldn't shy away from a challenge like that. I do not know exactly what she has in mind--probably pistol range--but she'll be here next Wednesday to talk with me about their program and I'll find out. A few of our faculty have already suggested, since they have so many instructors and we so few faculty, that we should perhaps include family members as part of CJ/FI team. If you're interested, please let me know.

I hope your first week is going well!

Wow! Take care of your family.

I left a couple empty boxes in front of your door that I was using to move stuff.

I'm gone all day to a retreat for department chairs (starts 8:30am) but I'll have my phone with me and I'll be able to check email a bit. I'll be back in the office by 3:30-4:00pm.

Good luck today!

DEPARTMENT MEETING

I am calling our first department meeting for Tuesday August 27th at noon in the conference room across from Sheri's desk.

There are two things I like to associate with department meetings: brevity and food. And so, I'm buying lunch. We'll have pizza/other food delivered; I know there is at least one of us who likes vegetarian, so I'll make sure we have a veggie pizza, something with onions on it (that's for me!) and some other varieties. If there's a dietary restriction I should know about before I order, please let me know.

I will get an agenda to you prior to the meeting; given that we're having lunch too, I'd expect us to be finished by 1:15pm or so. Brevity! And food!

UNIVERSITY CONVOCATION

University Convocation is 9:30am on Thursday August 29th in Williams Fieldhouse. It's scheduled for an hour. Our department is a major player here on campus so I'd like to see everyone there, representing us.

I'm told the University is handing out free food tickets at the grand opening of Bridgeway Commons to be used at lunch that day, so if you'd like a free lunch, go to the Grand Opening of BC at 11:30am.

LAE COLLEGE MEETING

The LAE college meeting is 2pm on Thursday August 29th in the Nohr Gallery in Ullsvik Hall. Please make sure this is on your calendar; the same comment as convocation applies.

GENERAL FACULTY MEETING

When: Wednesday, August 28, 2013 - 10:00am to 11:00am Location: Nohr Gallery, Ullsvik Hall. Look for an agenda from Melissa Gormley.

COURSE STAFFING UPDATES

We've filled the vacant sections of FORENSIC courses, slowly but surely. Aric Dutelle will teach the Fingerprinting course, Steve Elmer will do the Photography Course, Josh Grabandt will teach the Crime Scene Preparation class and labs, Ken Wiegman will teach the Evidence Collection and Preservation class, and Todd Kasper, Rick Lawrence, and Amy Hartwig will do a section of Intro to CSI. Two sections of Intro to CSI remain to be staffed; I am waiting to hear back

Diana Johnson will be supervising the teaching of the Intro to CSI courses and CSP course.

COMPREHENSIVE COMPONENT TO COURSES

As the re-accreditation of the university nears, one thing we need to be sure our courses include is some type of comprehensive assessment or capstone in each of our courses. This is part of the evaluation process the accrediting agency uses. It can be a variety of things; for example, a comprehensive final exam, a final paper or project that pulls together the elements of the course, and so on.

As some examples, here is how I do it in my courses: In my Principles of Sociology class, the final exam is taken from questions taken verbatim from the first four exams. Students have to go and master the answer to every question on every exam, and they can't just memorize letters; I mix up the answers!

In my Social Research class, the first half of the course is statistics while the second half covers more traditional methodological concepts like conceptualization, measurement, sampling, experiments, causality, surveys, and the like. The comprehensive project is to do a research design including not only what students would study but they must also explain their conceptualization, measurement, sampling technique, as well as how they expect to analyze the data, what statistics they would use, hypotheses to be tested, determination of statistical significance, and conclusions.

In my Crime and Delinquency course, students do a ride-along with the Platteville Police. They must write a paper tying together the theories from the course with the events they observed or the experiences of officers with whom they rode during the ridealong.

So, there are many ways you can demonstrate a comprehensive component to the course. If you have any questions about this or want to bounce ideas off me, or have a course in which this is difficult, please feel free to stop in.

EXTRA CREDIT

I want to caution you about how you use extra credit. I've heard of instructors--not in our department, btw--who are arbitrary in how they allow extra credit. A student comes to them, hat in hand at the end of the semester, begging for additional work to bring up their grade. The instructor grants that, but in so doing, the instructor has now created a non-equitable system of grading. That is, what is in the syllabus is not true, and some students have opportunities others do not.

This can lead to accusations of favoritism or worse.

It is difficult to defend a system where what is offered to one is not offered to all. So my suggestion is to make your policy on extra credit, if you use it, clear and equitable. Make up work for a student who has experienced a life crisis is a different matter.

See you Tuesday!

If and when I get time, I might take a look at that, but i have to tell you: It's not high on my list of priorities, Sabina.

I just added names according to the retained email names in my own email client, and his just happened to have that attached to it. It's nothing I ever added intentionally or otherwise, as the client must have added that from some email I replied to at some point in time--and frankly, my goal here was to get timely information out to people.

Sabina, when I was Platteville City Council President, do you know how people addressed me almost exclusively? Either Mike or Mr. Dalecki. Was I bothered by that? No. And that was for a very specific reason: my value isn't based on the initials behind my name, or the honorific preceding it. It is based on what I can do, and how I carry myself professionally. In the end, I wanted to be judged on what I did, not on extraneous things like my honorific. IMO, demanding people use honorifics has the same consequence as putting up fences between people.

Oh, there are times when it's useful--I probably won't ever introduce you to a student as anything other than Dr. Burton (maybe Dr. Sabina?) , because there needs to be an overt understanding presented to young people about boundaries and expertise, and honorifics do that. I often sign my emails to students as "Dr. D." And honorifics can have value in our dealings outside our inner circle; they can help establish credibility.

I was about to offer you a colloquialism but remembered how that worked out the last time :) so I'll just note it in more general terms: the more people focus on the small things, the more difficult it is to know what the big things are.

You must know that I respect you, and I understand that there are issues in regard with how you felt you were treated. I understand that and hope you realize that some of the decisions I've already made are an acknowledgement of that.

Sabina, that time in your life is over. I am not the guy I replaced, and I need your help and advise.

I expect you to be central in this department now in terms of defining how we go forward; I need you to be my model of professional behavior I can point probationary faculty to as someone they should emulate. This is a lot of pressure on you at one level--because I don't have that many tenured faculty I can use in that role. I need to be able to say to faculty, probationary and otherwise: be a professional, like Sabina!

And I'm very serious about that, Sabina. You do a lot of incredible stuff; we need that to be a standard to which others can aspire.

I know there is a way you felt you needed to approach the previous chair; I'm not that guy, Sabina. I need you to give me a break; let the small stuff slide. How I see your value in the department has already been demonstrated visibly to others. They know what I believe about you and your role in the department.

We're moving ahead, and I have to believe you're going to like and support that direction--after all, you're going to be a big part of that. We're going to have fun going forward! But give me a little time here because it's going to take time.

I've got a pretty full plate here right now, filling positions, getting advising settled (Aric's and Danelle's absences have produced ~175 advisees with no advisor!), getting budget settled, Patrick is a new faculty member, etc. If there's anything I can do to help, please let me know. Crises will make it on the first page of things to do, but less critical items might take some time to rise to the top.

A few things for your information.

DEPARTURES
ENROLLMENT

First, Aric Dutelle has been appointed as Interim Director of Grants, Research and Sponsored Programs. He informs me this position is expected to last until June of 2014.

As well, Danelle Bemis has resigned her position.

This leaves us a rather large hole in our FORENSIC department offerings. I believe we can fill most of those internally or with adjuncts; however, there is one course that is difficult to resolve.

That course is FORENSIC 3040, Crime Scene Processing. The course meets MWF from 2:00-2:52, and has two labs associated with it, both on Tuesday: one from 9:30 to 11:48am, and the other 12:30 to 2:48pm.

I'm looking for solutions here; do we (you!) know anyone who might be able to do this course for us, who is both qualified and available?

Or, perhaps there is another way to do this, possibly team-teaching it, or some other innovative approach that will allow us to teach it effectively?

So, any ideas here?

Second, there are a couple of office moves ongoing; Tom is moving into Joe's office, who is moving into the now-vacated Danelle Bemis office. I expect that office will also be used for adjuncts to use to meet students, etc. Also, Sabina and Steve are swapping offices. There are no other moves I anticipate, though as usual we are short on space.

Third, there apparently are some wild rumors going around. Sometimes rumors are entertaining, but in the end, they waste our time and mental capital and often can cause bad feelings even though the rumors have no foundation.

One such rumor is that our enrollment is being capped. To my knowledge, that's not happening. Another is that enrollment is being cut. Again, not to my knowledge.

As part of my gathering information in the last month, I've raised the question as to whether our enrollment is appropriate for our resource base. That's a question any manager would ask, and should ask on a regular basis.

When we are resource-stretched, it is natural to look at that problem from all angles: can we obtain more resources? Reshuffle to make better use of them? Reduce demand on those resources?

I've had a few "thinking out loud" conversations about these issues, partly as a way to get a handle on where we are and where we are headed. But this is also a conversation we as a department need to have on a regular basis: where do we go from here, what are our options, is there a mismatch between resources and work, and if so, what do we do about it?

I'll be sending out a couple more emails on our first department meeting, some other administrative details, and a few other tidbits. And if you have any suggestions for solving our staffing problems right now, please let me know!

Have a great day!

Dutelle could always have an office like the one I had for the last 4 years when he comes back. What was sufficient for me should be sufficient for him. It's not like he outranks me. I want Dutelle's office. It should have been mine when I came to UWP in 2009 when he was the most junior staff member.

Regardless, we need to do it this way. I understand what you're saying and if and when he is permanently transferred from the department we'll have to figure out space needs then. Until then he's still a member of the department, and he will be teaching a course for us this semester.

I understand and agree that there are concerns related to space, but I think we're heading in a better direction here and I want to keep that going. I cannot go back and undo any prior wrongs, whatever they may be; all I can do is ensure we move forward in a positive direction and manner.

I'm looking forward to having you next to my office; I'm anxious to make use of your experience and counsel.

I spoke w/ Patrick about the mentoring--while Loren is technically his mentor, i asked him to also consult you. I believe that mentors should be tenured faculty, not probationary faculty. But as I said, we'll go with it officially.

We can get OIT to help with the move of computers and phones (the phone numbers will remain the same--they stay with the phone). Sheri will need to fill out some forms but keys can just be swapped.

If I can be of help, either with temporarily storing things or otherwise, please ask. If we can get this completed by the end of the week, that would be great.

I'm open all day right now, so any time would be OK. How about something like 10am?

We could meet for coffee downstairs in Ullsvik or someplace else, wherever would work for you.

As I gear up for being chair for the next year I would like to sit down with the faculty and learn more about what they do. I'd love to sit down and chat with you about that, about the department, and anything else on your mind.

Do you have any time over the next couple weeks when we could do this?

Well, maybe you aren't a member of that committee, but the minutes are not wrong; you WERE absent.

Terry, you should take ownership of the things you do, AND the things you don't do.

Sabina, the issue I'm concerned with is that he described my behavior as unprofessional; I'm a bit concerned how he would have drawn that conclusion given that what I asked you to talk to him about was his lack of responsibility for seeing that the issue of the exam was resolved fell on his shoulders.

Holding students accountable for their actions is part of what we're about here--and I wanted to make sure he understood that. He didn't talk to me about any of this--you send me an email on his behalf. He himself did nothing after our brief conversation.

So, I'm again wondering about the substance of your conversation with him. Did you describe me as unprofessional to him?

Sabina, I'm forwarding you Mr. Eichholtz' email to me, received this morning, regarding the exam he missed on Thursday.

I think we may have a problem here.

My only conversation with him about this issue was in class prior to the exam; reading his email to me carefully leads me to believe that our conversation, which I thought was between you and I, apparently was relayed in full or in part to Mr. Eichholtz, who is now questioning my professionalism.

I believe I was quite professional in my brief conversation with him, as well as with you. I expressed to you my dismay over how he approached this, as well as the fact that he had you intervening instead of speaking to me about it.

That makes me wonder if you questioned my professionalism in his presence which, if true, is in fact an issue of professionalism. Did you share my emails to you with him?

I can't imagine how he would have had this response otherwise. Further, his concerns about my responses to his opinions is not uncommon on the part of students who believe the right to an opinion includes the right to have it taken seriously by others. I'm wondering if you reinforced the idea that all opinions are created equal, and having his challenged (with good reason I might note) is somehow a breach of professionalism on my part?

Did you talk to him about my response to you? I would like to know the substance of the conversation you had with him that would have led him to this kind of email to me before I respond to it.

Mike

Mr Dalecki

I thought I would inform you, now, that I will be dropping the class. No need for a reschedule.

Professionalism is clearly not your forte; a biased grade is not what I am looking for.

Please, for your next class, learn how to take student opinion into account. Remember, if we have to listen to your ideas and opinions then it is expected you listen to ours.

Also, if you have issues with me or something that I did, you come talk to me about it. Not only do I question your professionalism between professor and student but, also, between you and your fellow colleagues.

Thank you,
Miles

Sabina, he needs to address this issue with me. I appreciate your willingness to do this but in the end, this is my responsibility, as well as the student's.

To recap, he failed in notifying me far enough ahead to arrange for this, and his excuse that he couldn't do it on Wednesday is a weak one at best. We both know that it's likely he planned it this way, so as to leave little alternative. Well, given how late he approached me about the issue, I guess we don't have much choice, do we? I'll have to make a different exam for him and hope it's at least comparable to what the others will be taking tomorrow.

Sabina, he's got to take more responsibility for this kind of thing. I hope you've relayed that to him.

I'm a bit confused by this, Sabina; I expected to hear from William about this, as I offered to give him the exam earlier. Apparently, since he waited until the last minute to ask me about it, he's not prepared for it at this point, and at this point it's too late to have him take it this afternoon, as I offered to him yesterday.

Did he tell you that I offered to let him take it early?
