Sabina,

I will email him right now. Thank you for bringing this to his attention.

Dalecki is concerned about this and appreciated to be briefed. It is not acceptable behavior for a faculty member as it puts a student into an uncomfortable position.

things because I could not tell him in a face to face conversation about my sexual orientation. It all starts at the bottom of this email.

However, he told Deborah and me that he is much freer in the early part of next semester and will come down then. He goes to Globe University in Madison, and that school works on quarters, so he will have a break after his next quarter. Once again, I am sorry, but I will let you know when he comes down, and I will let him know about you. He is a kind, quiet man, and Deborah and I think between his studies and work he is ignoring a social life. For example, he cancelled coming down to visit us. So thanks again for being interested into going out to dinner. Also, he's a little taller than me, about the same build, and working on a B.S. on physical therapy.

I hope he does as it will be the last chance Deb and I get to see him before we head back West for the winter break. Thank you for informing me of your orientation. I will ensure he knows that and see what he says. Obviously, I was thinking more of my godson's future as you are an attractive woman and soon to be a college graduate, but I am happy you are still willing to go out to dinner with us knowing what my original thoughts were. What you have told me in the email below does not change my invitation; you are still very welcome to join us, but the decision will be Johnathan's.
